Parents of missing Madeleine say they are responsible parents and victim of a predator

McCANN'S HIT OUT AT BAD PARENT CLAIMS

The parents of missing Madeleine McCann have this week reacted angrily to media reports suggesting that they will face prosecution in the UK for being negligent parents. In their defence, the four-year old toddler's parents say they are convinced they acted responsibly. The report, published on Sunday, came as Gerry McCann prepared to visit Washington to seek assistance in finding Madeleine from missing children specialists and high-level US politicians. Madeleine went missing on May 4 from a holiday apartment in Praia da Luz while her two-year old twin siblings slept beside her. McCanns, see p.2

Portugal captures Spain's most wanted criminal

Wanted for the killing of three Spanish police officers and countless robberies, Spain's most wanted man, who calls himself El Solitario, arrives amidst tight security at the Figueira da Foz court. He was arrested this week in this coastal city as he was preparing to hold up a bank. He is said to have intended using the cash from the heist to flee to Brazil. (Photo: Lusa/Sérgio Azenha)

While the British media has sporadically been seen and heard vouching for the McCann family whenever a suggestion has been made locally that they might, or even should, face prosecution for leaving their children unattended, it is a report by a UK paper that has left the family most unsettled.

Airing his views this week after the report, Mr. McCann said: "There is a very upsetting story on the front page of a British national newspaper. The headline suggests that Kate and I face prosecution for neglecting our children by dining 50 yards away and checking on them regularly."

He further explains that while he knows "there has been criticism in some quarters of our actions but at the time, we felt our actions were responsible. We were essentially performing our own 'baby listening service', although we have talked of the guilt we felt at not being there at the moment Madeleine was taken." Mr. McCann has since revealed that the family has received legal counsel, stating their behaviour was well within the bounds of "responsible parenting", and subsequently been assured that no action will be taken.

"The real issue is that we should not have a constant fear of abduction of our children from their bedrooms, gardens or streets for that matter. What Kate and I did was at worst naïve, and no one should forget that the real criminal is the predator, who has taken a completely innocent child in such a premeditated fashion. It is this act that has wreaked havoc on our family and affected millions of other people", argued Mr. McCann.

In an interview with ABC's Good Morning America in Washington this week, he argued: "We were dining 50 yards away and we could see the apartment from where we were. It's like we were seated in our back garden, albeit at the end of our garden. The kids were sound asleep and they were being checked regularly. We didn't think we needed a babysitter. We are good parents and what we did felt perfectly reasonable at the time."

In a related development, and despite incessant speculation the past ten days, the only formal suspect in the case, Robert Murat, has to date not been hauled in by police to face further questioning on "new evidence" as has been suggested by the tabloid press.

Top police detective jailed over missing drug money

Ana Paula Matos, who has been a Polícia Judiciária (PJ) detective since 1977 has been placed in custody pending further investigation in relation to money allegedly misappropriated from drug traffickers. Inspector Matos, who supervised the two operations from which a total of €93,935 disappeared, had earlier been removed from field work and handed a desk.

Inspector Ana Paula Matos, who has been smashing drug networks for the past 30 years, was arrested on Wednesday evening on suspicion of having taken at least €94,000 off drug traffickers whose arrest she had ordered.

Internal affairs investigators had earlier suspected that as many as 21 drug enforcement agents could have been involved in diverting the cash seized from at least two separate operations.

As revealed last week by The Portugal News, internal affairs placed advertisements in daily newspapers, asking the public to come forward with complaints relating to money apprehended by investigators from the DCITE drug enforcement agency.

Internal affairs inspectors had given ten days for members of the public to come forward with evidence implicating unscrupulous detectives, whose task it is to seize cash and narcotics obtained from operations against international trafficking rings at airports.

The inspectors stated in the newspaper notice that their call on the public was solicited by the chief of the PJ Alípio Ribeiro.

It further says that "any person with a complaint or a grievance against the normal functioning of the DCITE" should come forward.

In the event of there having been more cases of police illegitimately seizing cash from traffickers, it is also likely that their "victims" would be serving jail terms.

The DCITE, which is a branch of the PJ, was first embroiled in controversy, when it emerged a fortnight ago that close to €100,000 had disappeared after it had been seized.

A day after the news broke, PJ Deputy Director José Bráz resigned, though he claims his decision to quit was "not necessarily" related to the embarrassing accusations being made against these elite detectives.

The chairman of the Union of PJ detectives and workers, Carlos Anjos, said latest developments are an embarrassment.

"We regret this situation. It stains the good name of an institution, and embarrasses all who work at the Polícia Judiciária", lamented Carlos Anjos.

However, he stressed the fact that it was the very PJ that detected the loss of seized cash, which was an indication that "internal control systems work".

In 2006, the DCITE seized €12 million in drug money, along with the equivalent of €1.3 million in foreign currency.

New tourist generation not targeted by outdated campaigns

Recent trends have shown that the present-day tourist who comes to the Algarve is much different from the one holidaying in the region in the 1990s.

Research indicates that tourists now book holidays over the internet, travel on low-cost airlines, stay for shorter periods and visit more times per year. Air travel alone brings more than two million passengers to the region every year.

However, despite the significant changes, promotional campaigns still appear to target the tourist of 12 years ago. No updates, studies or surveys to outline the new generation's profile have, as yet, been carried out.

A survey undertaken 12 years ago remains the sole instrument through which tourism campaigns are crafted.

Since the recent overhaul of the Regional Tourist Board (RTA) two months ago, vice-president Nuno Aires, is the first to point out the problem.

He says, "We are faced with this incredible situation of not having an updated study on which we can base our plan to promote the Algarve."

RTA president António Pina has launched an open course to compile a new survey and subsequent tourist profile, which is hoped to be ready by 2008, and will serve as a basis for present-day tourist profiles.

Leprosy cases double

The number of recorded leprosy cases in Portugal doubled last year in relation to the previous year, official figures by the National Health Department (DGS) have revealed.

The DGS explained upon revealing the latest figures on the disease, that the increase is largely due to increased immigration by people from countries where leprosy is still endemic.

According to the DGS the number of confirmed cases of what is also known as Hansen's disease, rose from seven cases in 2005 to 16 last year, which is also equal to the total number of cases between 2002 and 2005.

The chief of the Dermatology Unit at Lisbon's Curry Cabral Hospital explained that increases in the disease "have to do with immigration, especially from Brazil and Africa".

Hansen's disease is a chronic infectious disease caused by the bacterium Mycobacterium leprae. If left untreated, there can be progressive and permanent damage to the skin, nerves, limbs and eyes.

Effective treatment for leprosy appeared in the late 1940s with the introduction of dapsone and its derivatives. However, leprosy bacilli resistant to dapsone gradually appeared and became widespread, and it was not until the introduction of multi-drug therapy (MDT) in the early 1980s that the disease could be diagnosed and treated successfully within the community.

It is estimated that more than five million people worldwide are infected and is common in Asia, Latin America, Africa and the Pacific Islands.

The countries most affected by leprosy are Brazil, India, Guinea-Bissau, Mozambique, Madagascar, Nepal, Niger, Bangladesh, the Central African Republic and the Democratic Republic of Congo.

Zero death toll for Europe's largest bike meet

For the second consecutive year Europe's largest yearly bikers gathering, Faro's concentração de motos, organised by the Moto Clube de Faro, registered no road deaths whatsoever. This was a target achieved last year for the first time ever, and successfully repeated again this year.

Over the four days of celebrations five serious injuries were recorded – the exact same number as last year's meet, which was the event's 25th anniversary.

According to police figures, 23 bikers and drivers were detected driving while under the influence of alcohol, most of whom, interestingly, were not official participants in the mammoth event.

A total of 26 accidents were documented, eight more than last year, though of less serious consequence.

Police spokespersons have complimented the bikers' behaviour and "notable adherence" to the event, particularly where "safety procedures required by law" are concerned.

An estimated 750 PSP and GNR officers made their presence felt, the purpose being for authority to serve as a deterrent and as a preventative measure, rather than to restrict or put a dampener on the fun.

The ZerOKilled campaign was devised specially for the yearly bikers' meet and appears to have found a winning formula.

As the largest biker gathering in Europe, this year more than 40,000 people from all over the world made a beeline for Faro's Vale de Almas.

Entertainment starred Joe Cocker and included Portuguese 'father of Rock' Rui Veloso, Urbe, Tocá Rufar, Orishas, Blasted Mechanism, Pat Savage and the tribute 'Kiss Forever' Band, as well as the traditional 'Miss Wet T-shirt' contest, best bike and tattoo competitions, and the symbolic en-masse sardinhada, where hundreds of thousands of sardines are grilled by volunteers for hours on end to feed the hungry bikers and visitors.

Spread over 40 hectares, the venue comprises a fully-equipped hospital, six beds for in-patients, defibrillators, monitors, small surgery facilities, and a revival room.

Thirty-eight doctors and specialists, 60 nurses, 50 emergency technicians, 37 first-aiders, 23 drivers and six coordinators provided 24-hour medical assistance, on stand-by for all eventualities.

Also making up the mega-event are round-the-clock bars, a garage, an oversize canteen seating hundreds (who are kept cool with water-spray sprinklers) and a free bus to and from Faro.

Large quantities of hashish seized in Algarve

This week Portuguese PJ police made two significant seizures of large volumes of hashish, both in the Algarve, one on the A2 motorway, the other in Castro Marim, a short distance from the Guadiana bridge.

In the first case, 4,000 kilos of hashish were seized in a lorry with Spanish license plates, registered in Vigo, and which was intercepted on the A2 motorway.

Belonging to a company located in southern Spain, the lorry was being driven by a 53-year-old British man, who was subsequently detained.

Disguised amongst other contents, in paper containers, were large parcels of hashish totalling over 4,000 kilos. A second 30-year-old suspect was detained near Vendas Novas, also driving a Spanish vehicle which officials believe to have been designated as an 'escort vehicle'.

The seizure was the result of an investigation carried out last week, around various areas of southern Portugal's Spanish borders, triggered by suspicious movements of what is thought to be an international drug-smuggling organisation.

Portuguese PJ police identified a third suspect in relation to the incident before he managed to escape in a direction towards Spain.

Ongoing international investigations will now try to identify the origins of the drugs, which officials believe were destined for Spain and Northern Africa.

In a related story, PJ police seized nearly two tonnes of highly pure hashish pollen on Monday. Due to its purity, the product would reportedly have been worth more than three times the value of traditional hashish.

Four people were arrested in relation to the detention, three Portuguese (two women and a man who were related) and a man of Moroccan nationality.

It was the outcome of a 15-day investigation into internal trafficking.

The suspects were taken by surprise when intercepted while approaching the Guadiana Bridge, which connects the Algarve to Spain.

They had reportedly loaded a lorry with Spanish license plates in a warehouse in Castro Marim, before setting off for Spain.

Seven other vehicles were detained in the procedure, five passenger vehicles and two goods vehicles, two of which were sporting forged license plates.

At the time of their arrest, the four suspects were travelling in three separate vehicles, in convoy.

A police operation in Castro Marim on Tuesday resulted in the seizure of two tons of hashish and various motor vehicles. (Photo: Lusa / Luis Forra)

According to a SRITE (Regional Branch for Drug Investigation and Trafficking) official, the drugs are thought to have entered the country by sea, and more suspects are yet to be caught.

Those detained, aged between 29 and 53, showed no resistance to authorities and will be heard in the Vila Rila de Santo António courts.

Lisbon fails honesty test

Lisbon will not be rated very highly in the next edition of Reader's Digest which will be publishing the findings of 'honesty tests', amongst other international magazines, conducted at 32 cities across the globe.

To test the honesty of Lisbonites, journalists from Reader's Digest would leave a mobile phone unattended, waiting for a passer-by to pick it up before calling it requesting its return.

Lisbon was ranked 28th out of the 32 cities, with only Amsterdam, Bucharest, Hong Kong and Kuala Lumpur faring worse.

At the other end of the scale, the most honest citizens can be found in cities such as Toronto or Seoul.

In Lisbon, 30 mobile phones were left unattended, with only 15 of these being returned to their owner.

The 50 percent average obtained in Lisbon was 17 percent beneath the global average.

Portuguese workers have 36.5 days of leave a year

Portugal is the seventh most giving country when it comes to holiday leave in the 27-member state European Union, a study published earlier this week has found.

The study, conducted by Eurofound reveals huge differences between the hours worked from one member state to another.

At its extreme, it was found that citizens could work as much as two-and-a-half weeks more than fellow EU citizens.

In Sweden, once leave is added to bank holidays, workers can look forward to 43 working days away from their careers. However, Estonians were only entitled to 26 off work.

At the top of the leave table, is Sweden with 43 days leave, followed by Germany (40), Italy (39), Luxembourg and Denmark (38), Austria 37 and Portugal (36.5).

Children paid €30 to act as PM's 'students'

Prime Minister José Sócrates and Education Minister Maria Lurdes Rodrigues during the presentation of the "Schools of the Future" plan at the Belém Cultural Centre in Lisbon on Monday. (Photo: Lusa / Inácio Rosa)

It emerged this week that the ten children present at the unveiling of the government's Educational Technological Plan were paid by the taxpayer to be present at the ceremony led by Prime Minister José Sócrates and Education Minister Maria de Lurdes Rodrigues.

After the unveiling of the plan to create so-called "Schools of the future", which will cost an estimated €400 million, the children admitted that they had been hired to act out a school scene in exchange for €30.

The children were contracted by PR company Action4 Activism who had in turn been paid by the Education Ministry to orchestrate a successful ceremony.

A company spokesperson explained that the children were paid as it would have been difficult to find volunteers during the summer holidays.

The Plan itself, which has become a source of pride for the prime minister, foresees the installation of 12,000 surveillance cameras at schools and also to eventually eradicate the use of cash by students at schools.

As from September, each of the existing 27,000 classrooms from Year 5 onwards will be equipped with at least one computer with an internet connection.

The use of cards at canteens will not only seek to minimise the use of cash by pupils at schools, but will contain other information such as test and exam results.

EU approves passenger data sharing accord with US

EU foreign ministers, meeting under Portugal's presidency, approved a new data exchange accord, covering trans-Atlantic flight passengers, with the United States.

The accord, which replaces a provisional bilateral agreement in the framework of the fight against global terrorism, will take effect August 1, giving US authorities access to 19 categories of information on passengers flying from Europe to the United States.

Among the data that will be provided from information supplied at the time of ticket purchase are home addresses, telephone numbers, itineraries and credit card numbers.

The provisional agreement, set to expire at the end of this month, was set up after the European Court of Justice voided an earlier accord which it considered did not provide sufficient protection for the privacy of European citizens.

While the agreement reduces the number of shareable data categories from 34 to 19, it expanded the period US authorities can keep the data to 15 years from the current 3-1/2 years. TPN/Lusa

Portugal urges 'constructive' Russian action on UK extradition

The Portuguese EU presidency has expressed its "disappointment" over Russia's lack of "constructive" cooperation with Britain in Moscow's refusal to extradite a former KGB agent wanted by London for the murder of Alexander Litvinenko last year.

In a statement issued last week, Lisbon urged Moscow to "establish constructive cooperation urgently" on the issue, saying it hoped for a "satisfactory solution" for the problem that raises

"questions of mutual interest for the EU member states".

London ordered the expulsion of four Russian diplomats Monday in reaction to Moscow's rejection of its extradition request.

Portuguese Foreign Minister Luis Amado said he was "worried" about the possible fallout for the bloc from the London-Moscow controversy.

Lisbon is to host an EU-Russia summit in October. TPN/Lusa

Lisbon welcomes release of Bulgarian 'HIV' medics

The Portuguese EU presidency has applauded Libya's extradition to Sofia of six Bulgarian medics, sentenced to life in prison for infecting more than 400 children with HIV/AIDS, saying the move opened the door to increased bilateral cooperation.

The five Bulgarian nurses and a naturalized doctor of Palestinian origin, accompanied by France's First Lady aboard a French plane, were received festively in Sofia by Bulgaria's top leaders.

Bulgarian President Georgi Parvanov, as expected, pardoned the six immediately on their arrival from Tripoli.

The EU recognized "the constructive role" played by Libyan authorities in resolving the long standing controversy marring EU-Libya relations, and "the potential for strengthened cooperation" between the two parties, the Portuguese presidency said.

Later in Brussels, Portuguese Foreign Minister Luis Amado expressed his "satisfaction with the results of these negotiations", saying the medics' release had been a priority for the Lisbon presidency.

While underlining the successful role of French diplomacy in resolving the affair, Amado said the EU presidency had been directly involved in the negotiations with Tripoli in a "very discreet" manner, especially through Commissioner Benita Ferrero-Waldner.

He predicted that the bloc's relations with Libya could now be "normalised", allowing "new approaches" on a variety of fronts with Tripoli.

The six Bulgarian medics, all of whom pleaded innocent, were sentenced to death in 2004, a sentence recently commuted to life in prison. They were convicted by a Libyan court of having intentionally infected 438 children with HIV/AIDS, 56 of whom later died, at a paediatric hospital.

Portugal launches new attempt at future EU Treaty

Portugal has launched negotiations on the final version of the future EU Treaty - the second attempt by community Europe to adapt to its current size and to a "globalised world".

The aim of the Portuguese government, which holds the European Union presidency until the end of the year, is to quickly complete the negotiations in an inter-governmental conference (IGC) involving the 27 EU member states.

This would enable the new Treaty to be approved, in record time, at the informal summit of EU leaders scheduled for this October 18-19 in Lisbon.

It should be quickly accepted by the 27 so that it can be ratified/confirmed by all the EU national parliaments (with or without prior referendums) and take force before the next European elections in June 2009.

The document replaces the draft European Constitution approved three years ago in Rome, which became unviable the following year after failing referendums in France and the Netherlands.

The new Treaty's approval in Lisbon would thus end one of the most serious political/institutional crises in the history of the European integration process.

For the past three years an impasse has prevailed, with the perception of an EU whose institutions were at risk of functional paralysis after the recent admission of a dozen new member states.

European leaders had gathered on October 29, 2004, in Rome, at a ceremony then considered "historic", to sign the so-called "European Constitution", the Treaty that would replace and combine in one single text a number of earlier European treaties and provisions approved since the European integration process began in 1950.

The EU heads of state and/or government met in the Orazi and Curiazi Hall of the Roman Campidoglio (the same venue where the founding treaty of what is now the European Union was signed in 1957) to sign the Treaty establishing a Constitution for Europe.

On January 12, 2005, the European Parliament in Strasbourg approved the draft European Constitution, by a comfortable majority of 500 votes in favour, 137 against and 40 abstentions.

This was meant to mark the "kick-off" of the ratification process, as all the member states were then required to approve the document by referendum or in their respective parliaments before it could take force.

The process began smoothly and by May of that year nine countries had ratified the treaty. The first test was in Spain, where 76.6 percent of voters approved the Treaty in a referendum.

However, concern mounted when polls began to show a rise in probable "no" votes in France, an EU founding country and one of its most important member states. This was confirmed on May 29, 2005, when 54.8 percent of French voters rejected the new European "basic law".

After this thumbs-down many voices still urged the process to continue, signing a joint statement to that effect on the night of May 29. However, just 72 hours later the Treaty suffered a further setback when 61.7 percent of Dutch voters also rejected the Treaty.

European leaders meeting at the June 16, 2005, European Council marking the end of Luxembourg's presidency therefore decided to extend the Constitution's ratification deadline beyond the originally planned November 2006, establishing a "reflection period".

The countries that had scheduled referendums on the European Constitution and which had yet to ratify the text (Portugal among them) decided at the same time to postpone them to prevent an eventual "contamination effect".

After a year-long "reflection period" the EU leaders met in June 2006 to review the situation. They agreed on a route map to end the impasse, setting the second half of 2008 as the target for a decision, and gave the German EU presidency, due to begin in January 2007, the task of leading the process and finding solutions.

This would become the major goal of Germany's six-month presidency term and in the early morning hours of last June 23 Chancellor Angela Merkel saw her mission crowned with success at the summit of European leaders in Brussels.

At the end of a marathon negotiating session, the EU 27 leaders reached agreement on a mandate for the Portuguese presidency to oversee the writing and formal approval of a new text, now designated the Reform Treaty. If all goes as planned, it will also be known as the Lisbon Treaty.

The failed project for a European Constitution or Constitutional Treaty will thus be left behind, while ahead the process must still successfully pass through the Intergovernmental Conference phase and be ratified by all the member states.

The aim is for the Lisbon Treaty to take force before the next elections for the European Parliament in June 2009.

This would be a fitting achievement to mark the end of former Portuguese prime minister José Manuel Durão Barroso's first five year term at the head of the European Commission, making a second term through 2014 all the more likely.

Portugal and Spain toughen up cross-border security

The interior ministers of Portugal and Spain, sharing a "broad consensus" on Lisbon's priorities for the sector during its EU presidency, have reached agreement on deepened bilateral cooperation on a wide range of cross-border security issues. The announcement came within hours of Portuguese police capturing Spain's most wanted criminal after they foiled an attempted bank robbery.

In a "joint declaration" issued on Monday after talks in Lisbon, Internal Administration Minister Rui Pereira and his Spanish counterpart, Alfredo Pérez Rubalcaba, agreed, among other matters, to "intensify immediately the exchange of information related to criminal and terrorist activity, namely the fight against ETA", the Basque separatist organisation.

The ministers also discussed the Portuguese EU presidency's programme for the security sector, saying they shared a "broad consensus on the principal priorities".

Shortly before the ministerial announcement, Portuguese police said they had captured one of Spain's most wanted criminals hours earlier in the central coastal town of Figueira da Foz as he prepared to rob a bank.

He was to have used cash from the heist to flee to Brazil, police sources said.

Known as "El Solitario", the heavily armed detainee is wanted in Spain on suspicion of killing three police officers and for some 30 armed robberies.

Upon his arrest, the fugitive was using one of his many disguises.

At the time of going to press, Madrid had not yet requested an extradition, though Spanish authorities appeared satisfied that he would be tried in Portugal first.

In their joint statement, Pereira and Pérez Rubalcaba also underlined the "good progress" being made for introduction of Portugal's SISone4ALL system in extending the Schengen free circulation accord to new EU members and increased bilateral cooperation in environmental and customs issues.

Madrid "satisfied" with Lisbon's draft treaty proposals

Spanish Foreign Minister Miguel Angel Moratinos expressed his satisfaction with the draft Reform Treaty unveiled by Portugal's European Union presidency, saying the proposals "covered all essential points defended by Spain during negotiations" by EU leaders on the plans last month.

Speaking after attending the opening session of the intergovernmental conference (IGC) in Brussels, where Lisbon's EU chair formally launched negotiations it hopes will result in agreement on the new treaty by October, Madrid's top diplomat said the first reading of the text by Spanish legal experts had been "very satisfactory".

Luis Amado said at the IGC launch, that Lisbon is making all details on the negotiations public to ensure "transparency." The new draft treaty, and other documents, are already available for consultation on the official

Portuguese presidency website, said Amado, "particularly for the benefit of Europe's citizens."

Legal experts from the EU's 27 member states will now hammer out a treaty to be presented to the bloc's leaders at an informal summit in October. Portugal's No. 1 diplomat, stressing that negotiations on the new treaty would be primarily "technical", said any political questions arising from the proposals "will be dealt with later." TPN/Lusa

Free circulation pact inked with Andorra

Portugal and Andorra signed an accord Monday to give each other's nationals full employment and residency rights, officials said.

The "free circulation" agreement was inked by Portugal's government chief, José Sócrates, and his Andorran counterpart, Albert Pintat, and shortens the time needed for Portuguese living in Andorra to open businesses.

The 13,000-strong Portuguese community in Andorra, mainly working in construction and tourism, has called for years to be given similar rights to French and Spanish nationals living in the mountainous principality, particularly relating to business start-ups.

Portuguese will now be able to open a company after 10 years, instead of the present 20.

In return, Andorrans living in Portugal will be treated as "EU citizens" in relation to employment and residency. The two countries will also sign an accord to prevent double taxation.

Portugal has EU's quickest growth rate in research workers

Portugal has the fastest growth rate in numbers of research and development staff in the whole of Europe, Lisbon's minister of science, technology and higher education, Mariano Gago, said.

Speaking after a meeting of EU ministers to discuss public and private investments in research, Gago said: "Portugal is the country that has the fastest rate of growth in research and development personnel in all of Europe."

According to official Lisbon figures, around 25,000 people in Portugal were in full-time work in research and development in 2005, some 82% of them researchers. This marked a 4% increase in the numbers of these specialised workers in Portugal since 2002, the Lisbon minister explained.

Another issue studied by the 27 science ministers was the lack of women working in research jobs. But Portugal, said Gago, has already resolved this imbalance, having the fourth-largest number of females working in research and technology.

Some 44% of science and technology workers in Portugal are women, while the EU average lies at between 25% and 29%, noted Lisbon's science minister.

In a related development, Mariano Gago, said that Portuguese institutions will launch an unprecedented international recruitment drive this year to hire 1,000 researchers.

"About 1,000 researchers with doctorates will be contracted this year, for the first time, by Portuguese scientific institutions" through international tender, Gago said.

He made the announcement at the close of a two-day meeting of European Union science and higher education ministers in Lisbon that focused on discussion of how to boost the bloc's research and development sectors and stem Europe's "brain drain".

Lisbon's minister of science, technology and higher education also said Portugal had witnessed "very significant growth" recently in the number of youths opting for advanced scientific studies.

Questioned on the Portuguese parliament's approval of broad reforms for the country's higher education system, Gago welcomed the move, saying it would help "reformist forces" within the institutions. TPN/Lusa

WEB

Web (INTERNET) noun [S]

the system of connected documents on the Internet, which often contain colour pictures, video and sound, and which can be searched for information about a particular subject:

(From Cambridge Advanced Learner's Dictionary)

If only creating a website was as easy as that

It all sounds so simple and straight forward doesn't it? Well perhaps it used to be, but it isn't now. Today's surfers are web savvy, demanding, and expect much more than a few pictures and words put together using a standard web site template.

Today's web site can put your company and services right into your clients home or business. It can deliver streamed video, virtual tours, take orders, and receive credit card payments, in fact there's not much you can't do via the web.

The only problem is finding the people with the skills to create sites with the sophistication today's surfers appreciate and demand.

That's where we can help. We have experts in design, Perl script, databases, flash animations, credit card platforms and many other skills. Not just in Portugal, but also in Northern Europe and India. Have a look at the Portugal News eNewspaper to see what our specialists can do.

We can help you find the most cost effective way to develop outstanding websites at a very competitive cost.

Our own in-house specialists will coordinate your project and deliver results that will delight you, your clients, (and your accountant).

Carrefour preparing Portugal pull-out?

Respected daily financial newspaper Diário Económico was insisting this week that the major retail outlet Carrefour was talking to its rivals over a possible sale of all its stores in Portugal.

Carrefour has declined to comment on what it terms "rumours" while the Auchan Group, said to be one of the potential buyers, has denied its discussing a takeover.

However, Sonae, which owns Continente, has to date failed to rule out its apparent eagerness to purchase the 12 stores Carrefour currently operates in Portugal.

Carrefour recently received permission to build a further 11 supermarkets in Portugal, though it remains unclear whether these rights will be transferable to new owners in the event of a takeover.

Look for an opportunity, and do your homework

They found the perfect premises, a former vegetarian restaurant next to the post office in Almancil. But first they rushed to Carvoeiro to do a deal with the Fish & Chip shop owner to buy all his equipment.

Working on a budget, Julie decorated the new premises in all shades of blue and grey, creating a fresh beachy look and even managed to capture the feel of a seaside beach hut in the loo.

Julie and Mark have become masters of their art. The chips are hand cut and fried to perfection, while the fish, shipped in from Norway, is of dependably high quality.

Asked what she would recommend to other Brits starting a business in Portugal, Julie said "look for a need" and "do your homework". Don't try to do what everyone else is doing, but look for an opportunity no one else has spotted. Almancil, with all its English visitors, had no fish and chip shop for miles around, and that was a perfect opening for their entrepreneurial skills.

Regulations and legislation are very strong in Portugal, especially in the restaurant business, so Julie and Mark decided to take no risks or shortcuts. They availed themselves of the services offered by a company called PREVIA who advised them in health, food hygiene and safety and make regular checks to see if they are doing anything wrong. They helped with staff training, and all in English.

This helped with one of the difficulties encountered en route to setting up shop and Julie felt her inability to speak good Portuguese was also a setback.

Asked about banking, Julie said she was impressed with the services of Millennium BCP, but felt had she not already resided in Portugal for six years, she may have had difficulty, as a single female, in being granted a mortgage.

The Portuguese banks still seem to take a rather 'old fashioned' view about unmarried women. With a little gentle persuasion and insistence, she got the help she needed from the bank, even better, they now regularly drop in for lunch, and so she has won the bank over on two counts, finance and food.

As for the future, Julie and Mark are looking to open "The Battering Plaiçe" branches elsewhere in the Algarve and already have interested investors sniffing at their door.

EU wants improvements made to WTO proposals to liberalise world trade

The Portuguese EU presidency indicated this week that improvements should be made to the current proposal by the World Trade Organisation (WTO) to reach agreement on the liberalization of international commerce.

"We're still rather far from achieving a result," Portugal's economy minister, Manuel Pinho, said this week following an informal meeting of his commerce counterparts from the EU 27, which ended in the early morning in Brussels.

The last draft compromise presented by the WTO did not meet the expectations of the Europeans, Pinho told Lusa.

A month after the four-part (Brazil, India, United States and European Union) negotiations in the German city of Potsdam failed to re-launch the Doha Round, the WTO last week presented two draft agreements, on agriculture and industrial products.

The WTO hopes its proposals can help close the five-and-a-half year cycle of negotiations on the next stage of liberalizing world trade.

The agriculture text asks the United States to cut agricultural subsidies from 73% to 66%, which would reduce the annual outlay to American farmers to between US$ 12.8 billion and US$ 16.2 billion.

The most recent American proposal accepted cutting that amount to US$ 22 billion.

The European Union is also asked to reduce its aid by between 75% and 85%, for an outlay of between US$ 16 billion and US$ 27 billion.

Regarding customs tariffs imposed on agricultural products, Brussels should reduce them by between 52% and 53.5%, a figure that European Commissioner for Trade Peter Mandelson has said he is willing to accept.

In exchange for farming concessions, the rich countries ask the emerging nations to make their respective markets more open for industrial products.

In this area, the WTO text on industrial products suggests lowering the customs tariffs imposed by the 27 emerging countries to a range of between 19% and 23%. But in Potsdam last month, they refused to go below 30%.

EU sets sights on industrial reforms in environment-friendly setting

European economy ministers, meeting under the Portuguese EU presidency, called Saturday for reforms to make the bloc's industries simultaneously more competitive and environmentally sustainable, increase employment opportunities and bolster support for economic backbone smaller companies.

EU Commissioner Gunter Verhuegen, in comments at the close of two days of discussions in Lisbon, described the objective of "re-structuring the industrial base" as politically "difficult and important" to achieve.

The idea that environmental protection was opposed to increased competition and growth of employment was "obsolete", Verhuegen said, adding that such targets could be reached while dealing with climate change and lowering levels of greenhouse gas CO2 emissions.

Industrial reform, he stressed, presented "an opportunity rather than a threat", saying that Europe currently lived in a "time of fat cows" that eliminated excuses for delays or failure in working towards the targets set.

He said that a guideline document for industrial reform and energy policy was under preparation and would be presented before the end of the year.

Portugal's economy and innovation minister, Manuel Pinho, the two-day meeting's host, said Lisbon had set ambitious national targets in the energy sector, aiming for 45% renewable energy supplies by 2010, Pinho said, including a strong bet on increasing use of biomass from its forestry-based industries.

Verhuegen expressed his satisfaction with the consensus built around the Europe-wide need for more investment in research and development, technological innovation and science education, along with measures to support small and medium-size companies (SMEs) in cutting red tape and gaining easier access to financing - all aimed to make the 27-nation bloc the world's most competitive economy.

In one concrete step, he announced that 800 "contact points" would be opened across the EU to facilitate access by SMEs to Europe-level projects.

New TAP flight to Brasilia strengthens EU-Brazil ties

A new flight by Portuguese airline TAP from Lisbon to Brazil's capital will play "an essential role" in reinforcing relations between Brazil and Europe, Portugal's ambassador in the Latin American state said.

In an interview published in Jornal de Brasilia, Ambassador Francisco Seixas da Costa noted that Lisbon's EU presidency hosted the first summit between Brazil and the 27-nation bloc earlier this month. The reinforced dialogue fostered by this meeting will lead to an "important strategic partnership," said the Portuguese diplomat.

TAP begins its Lisbon-Brasilia service Friday, operating daily except for Wednesdays and Fridays. The Portuguese carrier already has 60 weekly flights to Brazilian cities from Lisbon and Porto.

The Turkish Election

The best thing about the outcome of the Turkish election on Sunday is that now the army can't make a coup. It may still want to: it was certainly making menacing noises about it recently. But after almost half the voters (47 percent) backed the incumbent AK (Justice and Development) party in Sunday's election, the army simply cannot move against it. A great many officers would just refuse to act against the popular will in such a blatant way, and the army would never risk a split in the officer corps.

The even better thing about this election is that Turks have decisively rejected the false dichotomy between "political Islam" and "democracy" that paralyses politics in so many Muslim countries. That matters, because Turkey is a rapidly developing middle-income country of 75 million people that still has hopes of joining the European Union. (The current obstructionism of leaders in France, Germany, Austria and a few other countries is irrelevant, since they will probably all be gone by the time a decision is taken in ten or twelve years' time.) But the election outcome is also important for other Muslim-majority countries.

Most foreign reporting of the Turkish election followed the script provided by the main opposition parties, the Republican People's Party (CHP) and the Nationalist Action Party (MHP), in which they were defending enlightened, secular democracy in Turkey and the AK Party was just a front for ignorant hordes of rural Muslim fanatics who wanted to shove shariat law down the nation's throat. It was a "test of Turkish secularism," they claimed — and if it was, then secularism lost. But that isn't what really happened at all. The real struggle in Turkey was between the "republican elite" and practically everybody else. The "republican elite" are a privileged and well-educated class of people who have virtually monopolised senior jobs in the military, the judiciary and the state bureaucracy for several generations on the pretext that they must have control in order to defend

A Turkish female supporter of Turkey's ruling party 'Justice and Development Party' (AKP) holds a Turkish flag in front of the city headquarters after the general election in Istanbul, Turkey on 22 July. (PHOTO: LUSA/EPA/Kerim Okten)

Ataturk's secular reforms (in the 1920s!). But these days, that is only a pretext for preserving their power: secular democracy in Turkey is not in danger. There are certainly fanatics in Turkey who would like to force all their fellow-citizens to conform to their particular brand of religion on pain of death. Every country has some of those, but they are as rare in Turkey as they are in Spain — and while the ones in Turkey probably do vote for the AKP, since it is the only party that openly espouses "Islamic values," they are a tiny proportion of its supporters.

Indeed, it's likely that quite a few of the people who voted for the AK Party this time are not even believers. Although officially 99 percent Muslim, Turkey has lots of unofficial non-believers, especially in the big cities, and many of them would have been attracted by the party's impressive economic record (five unbroken years of high-speed growth), by its unwavering commitment to membership in the European Union, and above all by its determined attempts to LIBERALISE Turkey's legal system.

The AK Party has consistently used the need to make Turkish law conform to EU norms as a justification for changing the law in ways that expand individual rights. Of course, that also undermines the ability of the "republican elite" to control the state from behind the scenes, so they are fighting back by accusing the AK Party of being a Trojan horse for religious fanatics who want to stop Turks from drinking alcohol and force women into "Islamic" clothing. The AK Party denies it, it has spent the last five years in power moving consistently in the opposite direction, and most Turkish voters believe it.

The larger significance of the AK Party's success in Turkey is that it demonstrates that devout Muslims can co-exist with their less devout fellow-citizens in a democratic constitutional order. All the devout need in order to prosper is recognition of their equal rights, not a monopoly of power and control over the personal behaviour of the less devout and the non-believers. In Muslim-majority countries where the secular holders of power and the Islamist revolutionaries see one another as mortal enemies — which is to say, in about half of the countries of the Muslim world — peaceful democratic change, compromise and co-existence of the sort that we can see in Turkey are regarded as impossible. It is war to the death between the establishment and the fanatics, and there is very little space between them for people who would quite like more democracy and civil rights but don't fancy living under shariat law as interpreted by extremists. Opening that space up is the most important political task these countries face. The interesting thing about Turkey is that it has been the Islamic activists, not the secularists, who did the hard work that made it happen. But let's be honest: even the AK Party would have found it hard to open the Turkish system up if it had not had the prospect of membership in the European Union as an inducement for everybody to be reasonable and cooperative — and it's unlikely that the EU will be offering Egypt or Pakistan membership any time soon. A5 drivers to suffer disruption until the end of summer

Road authority Brisa have informed that circulation on the A5 motorway, which connects Linda-a-Velha to the National stadium, will be disrupted every weekend until the end of August.

According to radio station TSF, Brisa is commencing with works to renew the motorway's surface, which will take place every weekend, between 21h00 Friday nights, and last the duration of the weekend until 06h00 Monday.

Traffic will revert to normal in September.

Brazil-bound plane makes emergency landing in Lisbon

An aircraft belonging to Brazilian company BRA, en-route to Recife, Brazil, was forced to make an emergency landing in Lisbon last weekend due to a 'technical problem'.

According to an ANA - Portuguese Airports spokesperson, "all of the passengers were ok and sent to a hotel", where they waited until they could proceed with their journey.

After taking off from Lisbon, the aircraft was destined to Madrid, Spain, where it was to meet a connecting flight before making its way to its final destination, Recife. Carrying 270 passengers on board, the Boeing 767 was forced to turn back to Lisbon's Portela airport to make the emergency manoeuvre after a technical problem was detected.

It landed in Lisbon at around 15h37, on Sunday afternoon, without incident.

According to the same spokesperson, the landing was a "safety procedure", but no further details were released.

Fines by the thousands reach post boxes around Portugal

In their first week of being fully-functional, the radars that were strategically placed on a number of Lisbon's main roads detected an astounding 17,788 speeders, issuing in average 2.541 fines a day.

In total, the fines are thought to be worth over one million euros, of which €320,000 will go straight into Lisbon City Hall's coffers.

During the first 24 hours alone the radars registered 4,090 speed-related offences, the most serious of which was committed by a vehicle driving along the Radial de Benfica at 176 kilometres per hour, smashing the limit of 80 km/h. The radars are installed on the Descobertas, da Índia, Cidade do Porto, Brasília, de Ceuta, Infante D. Henrique, Estados Unidos da América, Marechal Gomes da Costa and Gago Coutinho avenues, as well as in the Campo Grande, Marquês de Pombal and the Avenida João XXI tunnels.

All of the afore-mentioned locations are subject to a 50-kilometre speed limit, with the exception of the Radial de Benfica and the Segunda Circular, where maximum speeds are of 80 km/h.

Those breaking the legal limits face fines of between €60 and €2,500, as stated in the current Portuguese Road Code of Conduct.

St. Dominic's International School year graduation

Another milestone was reached by students graduating from St. Dominic's International School's IB Middle Years Programme (MYP) on Wednesday, July 4. After the procession began and the fifty-three proud graduates filed into the auditorium, Mrs. Sharon Thompson, MYP Coordinator, reminded the audience how important it was to celebrate the accomplishments that students made along the way to attaining the IB Diploma.

The MYP Certificate took the students one step closer to their goal. This is an important highlight because by the time the student has achieved this goal, each of them has learnt what his/her potential is and they know that they "can do it." Mr. Richard Sawyer was the staff speaker and offered words of support and encouragement.

Mr. Roger Marshman, Head of the Senior School, focused on the concept of responsibility in student leadership and how each of these young people can make a difference. He challenged them to broaden their "sense of community" and to be more widely connected. He suggested that they "think globally, act locally" citing the school's European Students' EcoForum and status as an EcoSchool green flag holder as examples of progress.

Student speakers were José Miguel Soares de Oliveira, Maria Dias, and Maria Teresa Silva.

Mrs. Maria do Rosário Empis, Principal, presented the MYP Certificates of Participation and each student beamed with pride as she shook his/her hand. Well done Year 11!

Mrs. Empis presented to Mr. Marshman the plaque awarded by the European Council of International Schools (ECIS) for an outstanding contribution to international education. Mr. Marshman is retiring after 44 years of engagement in full time education. He will be supporting several international agencies in a consultative capacity.

World Press Photo exhibition opens

Getty Images photo-journalist Spencer Platt was this year heralded as the author of the world's most captivating photograph, having captured a moment in post-war Lebanon that puts life into perspective.

The picture in question portrays a convertible car with four young passengers, seemingly of affluent backgrounds, riding through an area of Lebanon that was devastated by bombings.

It was taken during the first day of a cease-fire, when, according to Spencer Platt, "everyone came rushing out to see what damage had been done".

Previous to the cease-fire, that particular zone was a no-go area, off-limits to photographers and journalists.

Spencer was guest of honour at the exhibition's inauguration, along with Portimão Mayor Manuel da Luz, which took place last Friday evening on Portimão's riverfront.

"I always wanted to win a World Press award", he said, "for years I'd been submitting photographs to the committee. And this year, it was a surprise to find out one of my pictures had been chosen. But to go straight to the very top, it's just amazing".

Questioned on whether he believed a photograph could help solve world issues, he replied, "I am not an ambassador for peace, I am a photographer. I am a student of history. But I do believe photographs have their place, and they can help."

Mayor Manuel da Luz complimented the young photographer on his captivating image, which has had its fair share of criticism, namely concerning its authenticity.

It is strictly forbidden to alter in any way, shape or form photographs that are submitted to the World Press Committee, as well as setting up situations or asking subjects to pose.

But Spencer defends the photograph's genuineness.

"It happened in seconds", he recalls, "Out of the corner of my eye I just saw this shiny red car. In a war zone you don't see that many, so it kind of stood out. As they drove past me I don't think they even realised I was there, taking photographs, and in fact in most of the photographs a man had his arm stuck out in front of my camera. But when I looked at them afterwards I knew this one was special. It was spontaneous, real-life. Sometimes people want to believe what they are seeing is not real. But it is".

Every year the World Press Photo Exhibition travels the world, and debuts in Portugal, in Portimão.

Considering the exhibition one of Portimão's "main prides", the Mayor also revealed that next year it would be held in the almost complete 'Fábrica do Fêú', which will be inaugurated in December this year.

After Portimão the World Press Photo exhibition will travel to Lisbon's Museu da Electricidade, on 17 August, where it will remain until September.

Lions Club raise money for EXISTIR

The Lions Clube de Loulé would like to thank everyone who contributed so generously to make a success of their 'Garden Party' held on June 24th at the Restaurant 'Jardim do Vale' in Vale Formoso, Alancil. Special thanks to Sr Virgílio and Srª Fátima for opening the beautiful grounds of their restaurant to the musicians of the São Lourenço International School and to 'DJ Mikey' - Mike Briston for playing his music. A total of €2,066 was raised and will be donated to EXISTIR, a Loulé based charity that supported less fortunate people.

The Lions next sale of good quality used clothes linen, bric-a-brac, books and shoes will be on Sunday, October 7th, from 9.30am to 12pm at the Alancil Community Centre.

For more information about the Lions Club and to participate in their events, both fundraising and social, please contact Lion Bruce Allen on 282444874 or fax 282441683.

Sushi at the Sheraton

Last weekend one of the hottest new venues in the Algarve was unveiled to a vibrant group of invited-only guests. The Amo-te Pine Cliffs Sushi Club, situated within the beautiful Sheraton Pine Cliffs resort, is an exciting partnership between the Sheraton/Starwood Hotels group and Portuguese TV presenter Pedro Miguel Ramos' 'Amo-te' chain, and is one of the Algarve's must-visit venues of the year.

Set to take the resort to new heights, the venue's unique concept effortlessly brings together fashion and cool cuisine.

Stylishly designed with a contemporary architecture and stunning décor, blending natural materials and striking colours, Amo-te Pine Cliffs Sushi Club comprises an indoor restaurant and various open-air seating areas, beneath the resort's famed Pine trees.

The effect creates a modern, streamline feel, which complements current Japanese minimalist trends whilst adding fashionable, bold-coloured features.

Clientele can watch as talented chefs prepare and roll the delicacy in the open Sushi bar. Dressed in traditional Japanese attire, they work enthusiastically using authentic ingredients and equipment. Very entertaining.

On the night, Sheraton Pine Cliffs General Manager Flávio Bucciarelli was evidently excited about the venue's debut and turn-out.

"It's fantastic", he said about the overall result "I think we have a unique product and it looks great. I am really excited about this, it has worked very well."

Open to the general public, the venue offers an alternative experience for those looking for something a little different. From now until the end of August the Amo-te Pine Cliffs Sushi Club will host nightly entertainment, though the restaurant and club will be open year-round, from 11h00 - 02h00.

Guests at the launch included Albufeira Mayor Desidério Silva and his wife; Carlos Leal of United Investments Portugal (UIP), an IFA Hotels & Resorts consortium member and responsible for developing the 215-room luxury Sheraton Algarve Hotel and Pine Cliffs Vacation

Club, Pedro Miguel Ramos, and his actress wife Fernando Serrano, who at four and a half months pregnant looked simply stunning.

Favoured by Portugal's Jet Set and a haunt for the beautiful, amo.te venues are places to see and be seen, following a concept of glamour and lifestyle.

Pedro Miguel Ramos told The Portugal News in May how the latest expansion of his Amo-Te group, the first in the Algarve, would offer "a seductive ambience in which to relax, complemented by fantastic Sushi, a chill-out area, and a service that is second to none", enhancing the Sheraton's renowned image of style and exclusivity.

And that was undoubtedly achieved.

As the night went on the crowds lingered, the sushi flowed, and the Sheraton bloomed with yet another excellent product.

Brazil wins Beach World Cup

For the tenth consecutive year the Brazilian team has won the beach-football world cup championships, held last week in Praia da Rocha, Portimão, after beating Portugal 5-2 in the finals.

It was the 12th year that the 'Mundialito' (loosely translated as 'the mini World Cup') beach-football championship was held, the fourth time it was held in the Algarve.

The heat did not seem to affect the two teams, who put on a well-played game of tactic and effort, despite Brazil appearing to be the fresher, more energetic side.

All goals were scored in the second half of the game, and throughout Portugal was criticised for a number of mistakes that jeopardised their victory, as were the referees, accused of favouring Brazil.

Portuguese player Madjer was chosen as the tournament's best scorer.

Player José Miguel commented that the Portuguese side lost the title due to "small technical and physical details", stressing the fact that Portugal was subjected to "a greater physical challenge during the championship", whilst Brazil faced "easier opponents".

Overall results saw Brazil top the podium again, with Portugal in second place, and Japan in third after beating Switzerland 5-3.

Waterworks Park

All who attended agreed that it's so much more than a Bible camp. It promised to be a holiday week with a difference but everyone was unprepared for the huge success of the All Saints Children's Holiday Week – "Waterworks Park."

For five days last week children and adults alike revelled in the joy of riding the wave of God's love in an Adventure park full of teaching, drama, creative play, praise and worship and craft activities.

Each day the children learnt of God's love for them through five different Bible Stories, based around the theme of water, from both the Old Testament and the New. These stories were introduced each day at the Coconut Island Puppet Theatre where KoKo the Dolphin and Loop de Loo the Water Bird, held children and adults spellbound by their antics and their fresh approach to bible study. Each story was then developed in a number of different activities as the children rotated through Bible Bay, Raging River, The Souvenir Shop, Snow Mountain and Splash-tacular Praise and Worship. In addition to feeding the young people's minds, Snack Shack was on site to feed their bodies with snacks like Crossing the Red Sea Sandwiches and Life Preserver Donuts.

Over 45 children aged between four and 13 and 30 Adults attended the camp each day. The All Saints Adventurers (Sunday School) were joined by children from other English-speaking churches in the area, some travelling from as far away as Lagos and beyond, and also present were children who don't currently go to church.

"The response from the children and their parents to WaterWorks Park was wonderful. When we planned the holiday week our aim was to help the children to understand that God loves each and every one of them and just how exciting it is for them to know that" said Jo Blackman,

Water Works Park Director.

The Minister of All Saints (and puppeteer extraordinaire) Father Eric Britt said "As a Missionary Church here in Portugal we know that churches live and grow through their young people's ministry, and a large and fundamental part of our outreach programme is exemplified by our regular Holiday Camps for children. This is our third year of Summer Mission and each year the number of children and adults wanting to help, double. One of the uplifting aspects of this year's Mission was the way that the children with no previous experience of scripture, embraced the word of God and the concept of God's powerful love"

For more information about The Adventurers weekly programme, and Holiday Missions please go to the All Saints Web Site: www.allsaintsalgarve.org

'Controlled' police explosion kills one, injures four

Four officers were injured, two seriously, and one killed as the result of a 'controlled' police explosion which aimed to incinerate more than 50 kilos of confiscated explosives.

Amongst the explosives were gunpowder, an assortment of explosive devices and various firework artefacts.

A team of five GNR officers were assigned to the task of destroying the explosives, in a designated and secure area of São Marcos de Tavira, and who were reportedly 'qualified and used to handling such devices and materials'.

One was killed and two others sustained serious injuries of over 70 per cent burns to the body. The other two officers are said to be in a stable condition and 'out of danger'.

All five were helicopter-lifted from the scene and taken to Faro hospital for a medical assessment, before the two more serious cases were forwarded to Lisbon's Santa Maria hospital.

The cause of the ill-fated procedure is as yet unknown and still being investigated.

Arte Viva in São Brás

On the weekend of 14 and 15 July, 45 artists demonstrated their craft in the Algarve's biggest fair of live art at the Museu do Trajo Algarvio in São Brás.

The festival included works by a large range of artists of different nationalities, exhibiting work in various media, from marble to wool, in styles ranging through medieval to modern. New and well established artists showed a range of their work in what is becoming a 'state of the art' tradition!

Among the highlights were Taren Flaten's glasswork and Werner Tanzer's hand crafted jewellery as well as the photography of Karstie Stiege and Peter Schilde and the paintings of prisoners from Faro (as part of their rehabilitation), which all appeared together with the works of many other locally and regionally known artists. Live music in the event ranged from 20's hot dance from Oo-Boop-I-Do (making their fifth appearance at the Museum); hip hop and reggae from Bandojah; a stunning display of Portuguese guitar-playing talent from Amar Guitarra and ending up with the customary ever-popular local Portuguese group, Veredas da Memória. Live entertainment featured for the second time the very lively fashion show by Jouk Harris and her troupe of "real woman" models; facepainting by Mara, a young Portuguese from Fuseta; juggling (a huge success with adults and children alike); and an astonishing fire eating and fire juggling spectacular by FechÓpana, the famous theatre company from Vila Real de Santo António.

Following a violent attack carried out on a taxi driver in Albufeira last week, National Passenger Transporters Association ANTRAL has stressed the need for security cameras to be installed inside all taxis.

Last Thursday a 25-year-old driver was tied up inside his cab by three men, allegedly two Brazilians and one Portuguese, who threatened the driver with a gun, stole his cash, and then threw him in the sea off Praia da Galé.

He survived thanks to the vehicle's GPS system, which allowed the man to be located after he managed to activate an alarm button, alerting the centre about a situation of danger or emergency.

Américo Campos, Albufeira delegate for ANTRAL, said that in an area where some 90 taxis operate, the best solution would be to install video cameras inside vehicles.

It was the first time that a driver had to use the GPS alarm system since they were donated by the local city hall almost one year ago.

Join the HOGS!

All Harley Davidson owners are eligible to join HOG – the Harley Owners Group – a worldwide organization with over 1,200,000 members, 200,000 of which are in Europe. (Photo: Carrie-Marie Bratley)

In 1983 Harley-Davidson established the Harley Owners Group, or HOGS, as they are now commonly known. Worldwide membership currently totals over one million members. Since 2003 the Algarve has had its very own 'Chapter', with a membership that currently stands at 50 Harley aficionados. It is open to all new members, male and female, from all walks of life – all you need is to own one of the world's most legendary bikes!

Founded by Harley devotee Mark Stephens, director of the Algarve Chapter, alongside the Algarve's regional Harley dealer, the 'Algarve Chapter' is made up of all ages and a wide range of nationalities, predominantly Portuguese, English, German and Dutch, although Canadian, French, Spanish, Belgian and Scandinavian members are ever-increasing.

All Harley Davidson owners are eligible to join HOG – the Harley Owners Group – a worldwide organization with over 1,200,000 members, 200,000 of which are in Europe.

The Algarve Chapter organizes rides, meets and other events, on average twice a month. These are usually full day or half-day outings of between 150 and 450 kms.

An impressive 30 members of the group recently rode to Fuengirola, on the Costa del Sol, for the 16th Annual HOG European Rally, making a round trip of 1,250 kms.

They joined up with friends from other Chapters whom they have got to know over the years; Chapters from other parts of Portugal, Spain, England, and Scotland, Norway and, this year, Brazil.

Harley Davidson dealers are encouraged to set up local 'chapters' and with eight dealers in Portugal, seven on the mainland (in Braga, Vila Nova de Gaia, Pombal, Sintra, Oporto, Setúbal, and Olhão – Algarve) and one in Madeira (Funchal), there are always new friends to be made and an event, meeting or adventure to embark on – on two wheels, of course!

Joining fees are very reasonable and annual subscriptions of €36.00 make this club accessible to people from all walks of life.

Harley Owners Group is the owners association with most members worldwide. It strives to treat all members as part of the same family, with regular newsletters, meetings and forums, as well as seminars to teach local Chapter organizers how to run successful events and encourage local members to participate.

It may also surprise some to learn that within HOG there is a special place for female Harley owners, or wives and girlfriends, called 'Ladies of Harley', who have their own club privileges. Most local Chapters organize 'Ladies of Harley' events throughout the year to pay tribute and thank these ladies.

The HOG motto is 'Ride and have Fun', a theme and a spirit that is carried through all events.

Safety on the road and support for charity events are two other areas that HOG actively encourage.

Recently the Algarve Chapter participated in the 'Airsports Spectacular', held at the Lagos Airdrome, on Saturday, July 7th.

Hundreds of people paid a nominal fee to have a ride on the back on one of the exhilarating machines – many for the first time ever.

It was an endearing sight to see men, women and children of all ages and sizes cling to the weathered 'leathers', most of who, interestingly, are prominent business-people from a variety of backgrounds.

At the end of the day, all revenue reverted to two of the region's most deserving charities: the Lucinda dos Santos orphanage, and the Lagos Bombeiros.

Whatever myths and misconceptions may surround men (or women) in leathers and their powerful machines, one thing is true: any association based on the guidelines of family, equality, safety and fun, is one worth getting to know better.

So next time the HOGs are in town, why not join in with the fun. You may become a HOG yourself!

Kayak on the Ria Formosa

What better way to explore an area of such outstanding beauty like that of the Ria Formosa natural park, Eastern Algarve, than to canoe down the river itself and get a privileged view of one of the region's little explored treasures. "But it's hot", you may be saying, "It's too hot to paddle". Well, now you don't have to. Meet the Kayak of the future...

'Hobie' Kayaks are revolutionising kayaking, bringing it into the 21st century. Using pedal power, they are dry, easy to use and suit everyone. Feet rest naturally on the pedals allowing you to pedal effortlessly along the water.

After living in California, where the pedal-powered 'Hobie' kayak was developed, Steven Newton and wife Lilia saw the potential they offered. Upon their return to Portugal they also brought an import licence for Hobie kayaks, and have since set up a recreation company that offers kayak tours on the Ria Formosa. They are unique in the country and exclusive to the region.

"The aim is just to have a fun day out, relax, and enjoy the best of what the Algarve has to offer", explained Steven.

Based in the Centro Náutico (nautical centre), located on Faro Island (10 minutes from Faro airport) the tours can range from a few hours, to full-on adventure weekends. The most popular tour departs from Faro and heads towards Ilha Deserta, an uninhabited natural sand formation just off the coast.

Alternatively, opt for an exclusive prolonged excursion of a minimum two-nights stay in beautiful cottages on the Alqueva dam, complete with staff on hand to prepare, such as barbecues and private parties, if requested, and kayaks at your disposal.

Consisting of sandy islands separated by natural inlets and channels that are ideal for exploration on kayaks, the Ria Formosa is a natural park that is, in essence, a permanently changing lagoon system approx 60 kilometres long.

It comprises an abundance of wildlife both in the air and the waters, and you will also see local people going about their daily tasks as they have done for hundreds of years.

As well as the Ria's beautiful calm, clear waters and clean beach, the Centro Náutico also offers easy parking, a restaurant with good food at a good price, a grassed area for young children, and a easy-going relaxed atmosphere.

It is the perfect way to spend a day, whether you are on holiday, a long-time resident, or a frequent visitor.

The aim is to effortlessly enjoy the region's natural beauty, stress free.

Pop along on a Sunday morning and try out a Hobie Kayak, free of charge.

Sunbeams lead the way to new horizons

SolarCar broke through to the worldwide golf trade with an utterly innovative project and exhibited their SolarCars fleet to a select group of guests on the 23rd June at Quinta de Cima. Considered one of Portugal's best courses, Quinta de Cima has had a SolarCars fleet since 2006 and expressed satisfaction with the investment and were proud that it underlined their environmental awareness.

SolarCars official Tournament launch

The event enjoyed the presence of a particularly special guest of honour, H.R.H. Dom Duarte Duke of Braganza, from the Portuguese Royal House, who has been supporting several environmental friendly initiatives. Other important guests included CEO's of the main golf courses on the Iberian Peninsula. SolarCars shined and merged in the superb landscape of Quinta de Cima, affording golfers greater game performance and comfort. It was a memorable day for golfers and non-golfers who could enjoy a boat tour along the Algarvean Coast, in the Boa Esperança Caravel, a genuine replica of the one used in the Oceans Discoveries centuries ago. Guests could have a light brunch on board and enjoy other activities, such as a golf clinic by Tony Bennett, a PGA Professional. The whole event has led to raised interest among investors tors and has brought several proposals of partnership in the USA, Spain and Chile.

Sun inspires and encourages the concept of new models

SolarCar demonstrated the potential of their project by un-energy, any brand or model. They have an experienced and qualified team determined to make the difference and believe that in 2008, with an investment of five million euros in an entire Photovoltaic panels assembling line, they will be producing the panels at a much lower price. Thus, they expect to have a worldwide unique product entirely produced in Portugal.

Portuguese branded SolarCars are the future

The interest from golf courses in this kind of product becomes bigger day by day and represents the most important investment sector for SolarCar enterprise. Golf is the tourist sector that generates millions in Portugal and all over the world, and therefore SolarCar is making an ambitious future investment. They are setting a solid trail, winning their place in the competitive and daring market of renewable energies, thanks to their determination and creativity to risk entirely new solutions and methods, while assuring top quality.

Portuguese Chamber Annual Golf Day

The London based Portuguese Chamber of Commerce held its annual Algarve Golf Tournament and Dinner on 5th July at the Alto Golf Club in Alvor, Portimão.

Twenty-eight golfers had signed up for the Tournament on the championship course - the last designed by Sir Henry Cotton, a three times Open Champion, and resident in the Algarve for over 25 years.

Before teeing-off golfers were offered a light lunch sponsored by Francisco Brito, who operates the banqueting at the Alto Golf & Country Club.

Following the Tournament, members and guests attended a reception and dinner in the luxurious clubhouse. The Espumante Reception on the terrace with magnificent views over the course was sponsored by Atelier do Sul, long standing Chamber members with offices

Should marriage be encouraged?

SIR, We applaud David Cameron's statement that the causes of social and family breakdown need to be addressed, also his unequivocal support for the institute of marriage, without being judgmental about couples who choose not to formalise their union. He was speaking in support of the Breakthrough Britain report headed by Iain Duncan Smith.

Mr Cameron said he made no apology for speaking up for marriage, quoting figures showing that half of all unmarried couples separate by their child's fifth birthday compared with one in twelve married couples.

Melanie Phillips agrees that Iain Duncan Smith has correctly identified the issue of the fractured family as being the 'foundation of our social problems', and goes on to state 'It is family fragmentation which is fuelling crime, drug and alcohol abuse, educational failure, worklessness, mental and physical ill-health and teenage pregnancy. And at the core of this issue lies the progressive and systematic undermining of marriage.'

The way in which two parent families are discriminated against in the present tax system is held by many to be a disincentive to marriage, hence David Cameron's pledge to tear up the present tax and benefits system and replace it with one which encourages marriage. He says, 'we need a big cultural change in favour of fatherhood, in favour of parenting, in favour of marriage.' We say Amen to that.

TONY AND LOIS HERRINGTON. By e-mail.

This may not happen again!

SIR, I agree with James Ross (Letters 14th July)!! Well, only a little bit, and no, there is no man in a white coat standing by as I write this!

From a purely secular view, why shouldn't Christians be able to "preach the Gospel" if they wish? James has already admitted that nobody listens, so what's the harm? It surprises, nay, amuses me that those who have not one religious chromosome in their entire bodies get uptight when Christians raise their heads above the parapet. They forget that if it were not for Christianity we wouldn't get many holidays!

And call me old-fashioned, but sodomites (let's call a spade a spade - 'gay', as used in James' letter is a perversion of the old meaning of the word) should not have free access to children in schools" or anywhere else.

He also echoes the fears of the silent non-Muslim British majority with his remark about Islam; even a cursory skim through the Koran will confirm the origin of what has happened in London and Glasgow. Read 'The End of Faith' by Sam Harris for further info!

But here James and I part company. Of course we can't have absolute certainty in ethics or religion; his comparison of these with money is a non-sequitur. Religion and ethics are based on intangibles; to base religious arguments on reason and historic fact deservedly exposes them to ridicule, hence the need for myth and superstition to keep them going. And a study of religion, unprejudiced by denominational dogma, reveals that it is self-refuting. By way of example, James, you were wrong way back; Jesus doesn't claim to be God. (Read John 14:28!)

MICHAEL BAUGH, by email

Here we go again.

SIR, To the dismay of those who wrote to you many times requesting an end to the seemingly endless discussion that took up much of the Letters page for months, the god debate is up and running again! The main protagonists are back, refreshed and raring to go! Well, whether readers like it or not, it has given us the first full page of correspondence for a long time.

I'm with the anonymous writer (7th July) who believes that religion has no place in schools. Sure, children should be made aware of the major religions of the world but not subjected to the deliberate brainwashing of their young minds before they are old enough to think for themselves.

Members of particular religions overlook the lottery of where and to whom they were born. Does it ever cross their minds that some of them might have become equally dedicated followers of Allah, (Now there's a scary thought!) or Buddha, or even an unknown god worshipped by some as yet undiscovered tribe in the depths of the South American rain forest? One that demands group sex and the occasional human sacrifice to keep him/her/it in a benevolent mood, perhaps?

As to why Christmas came to be celebrated on December 25, "It remains uncertain, (says my Encyclopaedia Britannica) but most probably the reason is that early Christians wished the date to coincide with the pagan Roman festival marking the 'birthday of the unconquered sun' (natalis solis invicti); this festival celebrated the winter solstice, when the days again begin to lengthen and the sun begins to climb higher in the sky".

I'll now sit back, watch the fun and take no further part in this discussion.

RON LAVERY, by email

Horses and Carts

SIR, In asserting that institutions ban Christian crosses and rings because they are JEWELLERY (his capitals), Mr Glen Hague (Letters 7 July) puts the cart before the horse. Rather, the school and the airline wanted to suppress these items and therefore chose to define them as jewellery. Otherwise why permit Hindu bangles and Islamic lockets and headscarves? "Jewellery" is banned because it's Christian. (The argument about the alleged religious imposition of the above items on the pious wearer is a red herring, given the lack of relevant consensus among the various religious spokesmen.) So the rules are being drafted so as to discriminate against Christians. Why?

Because the ruling dogma of "Diversity" dictates that all faiths and cultures are to be regarded as equal and that difference is good in itself. However, this co-exists with a secular outlook hostile to organized religion and its traditional pieties, and a preference for untrammelled individualism.

"Diversity" declares Islam (and other exogenous belief systems) to be good. But Christianity is stigmatized as the "dominant" culture, which, being indigenous, is insufficiently "diverse". Thus Christianity and its values are condemned and delegitimised, whilst other cultures and religions have their dogmas (and their dress sense) "embraced" and "celebrated".

Based on the same mind-set, anti-gay tracts are stamped "hate literature", whilst extolling homosexuality in schools is "combating prejudice". But hate literature, and hate speech, (like their cousin Islamophobia) are only labels. Liken names defining "jewellery", they are attached to attitudes officially cursed (a current example of which is asserting the right to criticize certain unnameable non-Christian authoritarian belief systems). Only sixty years ago atheists and gays kept their voices down. Now the situation is the exact opposite. Whilst the intolerance level is identical, the values championed or execrated are very different (except in the case of Islam's open hostility to homosexuality, but we'll let that pass, as Mr Hague is happy to do). Because he shares the reigning values, the prejudices underpinning the airline rules and the school dress code - and their contradictions - are invisible to him. As the philosopher N E Simmonds notes, "the best way of enforcing a particular view of things is to simply take it for granted".

ALAN WEBB, by email

Carbonic acid gas

SIR, The heading is another name for carbon dioxide which we, or many of us at least, believe to be a factor in climate change which is said to be a bad thing. To combat this we hear voices raised in favour of ethanol as a substitute for petrol and this is feasible. Ethanol is the goggle factor in beers, wines and spirits and is obtained from sugars by the action of yeasts. Most of us call it alcohol which, as normally consumed, is a mildly poisonous intoxicant. Rectified (i.e. 100%) spirit is an odourless, colourless liquid obtained from the products of brewing by distillation.

However, the use of ethanol will not help in combating climate change as the products of combustion are carbon dioxide and water and, as anyone who has attempted home brewing will know, the production process itself generates copious quantities of carbon dioxide.

The conclusion I draw from this is that there is an impending fuel crisis: this was predicted some years ago by a friend of mine who then worked for British Petroleum: and we are being brainwashed into having our motors powered with alcohol. Industry is largely indifferent to environmental concerns.

ALAN THOMAS, Paço de Arcos

Celebrate what?

SIR, Last week John Nuttall wrote a lovely ode to nature in which he described starry nights, glistening dew drops and roses in bloom. He spoke of how all of nature's critters fulfill their purpose and of the complexity of life's cycles. I have absolutely no problem with all of this. It is only at the end of his paen that Nuttall steps out of the world of nature loving poet into the world of cosmologist and says, "The cosmic rhythm is that nothing is ever destroyed-only recycled-reborn. Celebrate it!".

I can't tell if Mr. Nuttall is talking about the Law of the Conservation of Matter and Energy or if he is foisting some kind of pantheistic new age mumbo-jumbo on us. His failure to mention the God who made all of this bothers me. He wasn't specific?

Actually, the Second Law of Thermodynamics and the Law of Entropy do tell us that the cycle of the universe will eventually wind down to a frozen halt. If nature is going to wind down, we can conclude it was once wound up a finite amount of time ago (if an infinite time ago, it would have already become static). In other words, this finite universe wasn't always here. All of nature owes its existence to a "super"-natural cause. The Bible tells us that the wonderful design of nature should lead us to the Designer. We should celebrate Him.

If I have been unfair to Mr. Nuttall, perhaps he can explain his letter.

Thank you,

Erratum

SIR, In the July 21 edition of Portugal News you printed my letter "Christian and proud of it". Unfortunately this contains a serious typographic error. What I said was: "up until about 30 (thirty) years ago, the British Isles had a Christian culture. "you wrongly changed this to "300 years ago". Of course, Britain was a Christian country then too, but I am talking about more recent changes.

Re Westheimer article July 21

SIR, Knowing that Ms Westheimer has lived in Portugal for several years, I am surprised that she does not seem to know that an almost identical parade - including the flyover of jets in formation - takes place here every year on June 10, the Portuguese National Holiday. This year we watched the celebrations in Setúbal and, like Paris, there were tanks, armoured vehicles, all the Portuguese regiments and armed forces including soldiers in full combat dress. Again, similar to Paris, the entire parade was accompanied by cheering and waving crowds.

Whether such demonstrations of military strength are good or bad, I don't wish to comment. But to be fair to the French and Portuguese, it does seem to me that other countries, like Britain and the USA, don't go on parade, they just go straight to war with no questions asked, leaving death and destruction in their wake, and consequences that we all have to live with.

Body Talk - for a supple, silky skin

Summer is well and truly here, and what better time to start taking care of your body? The sun's out, you feel wonderful but how does your skin look and feel? Dry, scaly, flaky, dehydrated... don't panic there are loads of things you can do and with summer here there really is no better time to start.

Summer and your skin: The sun is your skin's worst enemy. It will dry and dehydrate your skin, cause pigmentation and contribute to the breakdown of collagen.

First things first: Apply your sunscreen in the morning and reapply regularly if you are spending long periods in the sun. There are some fantastic products available to give you the maximum protection from the sun's damaging rays. Dermalogica's 'Multivitamin Body Block' is an intensely nourishing sunscreen and body moisturiser that treats areas prone to ageing as it is packed full of vitamins that will protect against UV-induced free radical damage. It will also help the skin recover from previous damage while smoothing and relieving dryness.

Do It Yourself:

It's very difficult to get into a homecare routine. The key thing is to start with a simple plan that's easy to stick to and that takes minutes to complete. Once you get used to a simple plan, you'll enjoy doing it and you will start to see the benefits. At this point you can start to introduce additional products to complete your body care routine.

1. Put the soap down!

It is vital that you don't use soap on your skin. This will sound bizarre as you'll have been using soap on your body for years, but let me explain. Your skin has a pH of 4.5 to 5.5, which is slightly acidic. Soaps are slightly alkaline and because of this will dry out your skin significantly. Even if a soap claims to be pH balanced this will mean it is pH 7 (neutral) not balanced to your skin. If you can't shower without soap there is only one option and that's 'Johnson's 5.5'. However, shower gel or body wash is the simple answer.

Try 'Radox Relax Shower Gel' with a blend of lavender and waterlily to help relax your mind or for something more refreshing what about 'Elemis Sharp Shower' to give you a real refreshing wake up call with Peppermint and Thyme. For an all round cleansing and refreshing shower experience go for 'Dermalogica Conditioning Body Wash'. Purifying essential oils and natural extracts cleanse the body without over-drying, it will condition the skin, de-stress the mind and soothe the senses.

2. Get rid of those dead skin cells!

Exfoliation is the next step. Exfoliating your skin will remove all the dulling dead skin cells from the surface, it will also deeply cleanse and remove the build up of dirt and bacteria from your pores. A great way to start an exfoliating routine is with the 'Dermalogica Ultimate Buffing Cloth', there's no need for an exfoliating product. Just dispense a small amount of your shower gel on to the cloth and get scrubbing.

It's gentle enough to use every day if you want but it's extremely effective and will leave your skin feeling super smooth and deeply cleansed. If you use an exfoliating scrub try to exfoliate 2 - 3 times per week. When buying an exfoliating scrub for the body look for a natural based scrub like 'Dermalogica Exfoliating Body Scrub' that contains Pulverized Fig, Date and Olive seed powders or 'Elemis Devils Mint Body Scrub' that contains skin-friendly, exfoliating sea plant particles. This part of your body care routine will take 2 minutes, massage the exfoliant onto damp skin when in the shower and then rinse.

3. Nourish your skin!

The next step is to moisturise. This process has many benefits, the movements used to massage in a moisturiser will stimulate the circulation, which will bring vital nutrients to the skin more efficiently thus nourishing and conditioning your skin from the inside out. Different moisturisers do different things. You may need a hydrating body cream or an ultra rich cream if your skin is feeling particularly dry. To apply your moisturiser, use large sweeping strokes, starting from the feet upwards, always working towards the heart.

If you were to stick to the routine above you will see a vast improvement in the texture and tone of your skin in as little as a week. You can go one step further and really indulge yourself at home with some of the idea's listed below.

It's bath time: Having a nice warm bath is a wonderful way to relax, destress and nourish your skin. When choosing your bath product, firstly decide what you want it to do! If you want it to destress try 'Radox Muscle Soak Herbal Bath' or a sprinkling of 'Dermalogica Mineral Salts' both of which contain Clary Sage, renowned for its soothing effect on aching muscles. To completely indulge and relax use a few drops of lavender to ease mind and body. Using an oil will also benefit the skin as they penetrate deeper into the skin. If you want a detoxifying experience in the bath why not try 'Decleor Bain Non Moussant'

THE BRITISH RETIREMENT HOME ESTORIL

Founded in the mid-1980's, the British Retirement Home is situated in a quiet cul-de-sac near the beach, within easy walking distance of the centre of Sao Pedro do Estoril, on the Lisbon-Cascais railway line. Open to residents of all nationalities, it comprises 10 unfurnished apartments with a kitchenette and an en suite bathroom as well as 8 individual rooms with private bathroom for those who are less independent. 24 hour Care Support is provided by a bi-lingual team, headed up by a registered Nursing Sister. Links with the local community ensure a steady flow of volunteers to help with outings, shopping trips and social events.

Non-residents are welcomed on a daily basis or for short-term stays for recuperation or holiday periods.

which combines remineralising and stimulant properties with the draining benefits of essential oils. If you want to create a spa experience at home, these products are certainly what you need, but ensure that you're not going to be interrupted and really create a spa atmosphere by using candles and by listening to calming music or just your favourite CD.

Body Brush: Dry body brushing is a great way to exfoliate the skin, stimulate the circulation and lymphatic system. The lymph system gets rid of all the toxins in your body and this will therefore detoxify and (as an extra bonus), can be successful in reducing the appearance of cellulite.

Salon and Spa Treatments

For the ultimate in body treatment luxury, head to your skin centre, beauty salon or spa. Prices vary starting from 25 euros for a basic body exfoliation up to 120 euros for a full body wrap treatment. Having a body treatment is a great way to get you interested in starting a homecare routine for your body. Also your therapist will be able to recommend specific products that would be suitable for you to use and may also personally prescribe a homecare routine completely suited to you and your lifestyle.

Wrap it up: Different body wraps have different effects just like all body products. They can relax, nourish, tone and detoxify. At this time of year a Hydrating Body Wrap may be just what your skin needs. A hydrating body wrap will usually consist of a hydrating gel being applied to the entire body. The therapist will then wrap you in plastic sheets and blankets. The main benefit of the wrapping is to heat you up so that your pores open and absorb the product much more effectively. Depending on the type of treatment you may well be treated to a scalp massage while the body wrap is on. The wrap will usually be left on for 15 – 20 minutes by which point most of the hydrating gel will have been absorbed. Once the excess gel has been removed, the treatment will be completed with a full body moisturise, to nourish your skin. A treatment like this should not only leave your skin feeling divine but it will also be deeply relaxing, you will be guaranteed to leave the salon or spa feeling wonderfully pampered. After a body wrap treatment it is essential that you drink plenty of water and relax as much as possible. Try and have a treatment like this later on in an evening when you will be able to go home afterwards and completely relax and take it easy, ensuring that you will feel the complete benefits of the treatment.

In terms of salon and spa treatments the list is endless, from exfoliations and wraps to purifying back treatments, the choice is yours!

Maintaining your modesty:

When you have a body treatment in a spa or salon you will be asked to wear paper pants, these are by no means flattering but don't worry, a good therapist should be trained well enough to maintain your modesty. Your therapist will usually ask if you want the bust included in the body treatment, some people feel uncomfortable with this so the therapist should always ask first.

Finally... Enjoy your body treatments, whether it's five minutes in a morning or an hour's body wrap every week, give yourself time to enjoy your treatments. Always choose products that you like the smell of and this goes for body treatments in spas as well. Your sense of smell is very powerful and if you don't like the smell of something you will not relax. Please remember that everyone's skin is different and before starting an intensive body care routine you may want to consult your skin therapist, just to make sure that what you're doing is right for your skin, especially if you have sensitive skin or any form of skin complaint or problem. Suzie Bell, Senses Skin Care Centre – 282 762 261 / 913 275 869.

High noon in Ecuador

The closest I've ever got to horse riding is watching John Wayne in True Grit, and a quick donkey ride around Blackpool beach. To describe me as a beginner would be an understatement. But with a father who loved cowboy films, I studied the Sunday afternoon genre from Rawhide to A Fist Full Of Dollars and the idea of galloping through fields complete with obligatory cowboy hat was too good an opportunity to miss.

South America is steeped in horse-riding history from the Gauchos of Argentina to the Chagras of Ecuador. I duly flew into the Ecuadorian capital of Quito in the north of the country determined to mosey out the other side as an accomplished horseman.

My cowboy ambitions to one side, I had no idea how to ride and was lucky enough to be put

Horseback provides a unique vantage point from which to explore the sights of Ecuador. (PHOTO: Press Association)

We arrived back at the hacienda at around 6pm, tired but thrilled with the countryside and a successful day's riding.

The farm itself offers guests a wonderfully warm and friendly slice of Ecuadorian hospitality. With only seven double rooms, the ranch offers a very personal and exclusive touch, and after an exquisite home cooked meal and a tiring day in the saddle, guests can relax and retire to their rooms for some much-needed rest.

Most of the rooms have their own fireplaces - the scorching heat of the mountain days are contrasted with the brisk nights. I had spotted them on my arrival and was delighted to find that mine had been lit while I was at dinner. And just when I thought it couldn't get any better, I hopped into bed to find a hotwater bottle gently warming the sheets. Not very rough-and-ready cowboy style, but the comfort was very gratefully received.

Our second day was a much more gruelling eight-hour tour of the region. We loaded up our trusty steeds at around 9am and headed off along a stone road in the direction of Otavalo. After a short distance we began to climb and follow the twists of an old sandy trail, our route taking us close to a series of Incan and pre-Incan ruins. We rode up a steep incline winding our way along the gorges and field contours before crossing the Pessillo plains.

The group climbed several hundred feet before stopping for lunch outside a lonely farm shack in the imposing shadow of the snow-topped Cayambe Volcano.

It is hard to imagine a more spectacular picnic venue. We laid out our lunch and gave the horses a well-earned rest, before stretching out on the grass and admiring the view.

It's all well and good to take a slow meander through the countryside but what I really wanted was some Pony Express-style speed. So on the way back we decided to try and put our horse skills to the test with a little galloping.

Ranchero was delighted when we opened up the throttle and began to tear across the plains. I was delighted too, but the only trouble with letting a horse go fast is getting it to stop.

The sign to get your animal moving is a quick kick with both heels. This also is confusingly close to what happens if you try and hold on to the horse with your legs while bouncing around in the saddle, clinging on for dear life.

With every bounce, Ranchero kept thinking I was daring him to speed up and go faster.

Eventually I remembered to keep my heels from his sides and he remembered he was carrying a guy who was counting his time in the saddle in hours rather than years.

The minor issue of stopping to one side, horse racing is enormous fun and I found it much easier to move with the rhythm of Ranchero's steps when he was galloping rather than trotting.

Everyone had warned me of the inevitable aches and pains that a holiday horse riding would include. A steady stream of cartoon figures grimacing in agony as they sat in steaming buckets of ice played through my mind.

I was prepared to walk in a creaking John Wayne bow-legged waddle for the days of my trip and decided to just get through it and do as much riding as possible. In the words of the legendary Mr Wayne, "Courage is being scared to death but saddling up anyway." Awesome.

The reality was much less dramatic. Apart from a few very minor twinges in my thighs and the loss of most of my inside leg hair due to extreme chaffing, I was otherwise unharmed.

I can't be sure I qualify as the comprehensively trained cowboy that I had hoped, but if I ever find myself in Blackpool again, I'll take that donkey on the gallop of its life.

swiftly through a crash course on horse handling.

I learned all the basics on how to persuade my four-legged transport to move in the direction and speed I wanted, even though it often felt more like my steering was purely coincidental to where I went.

We drove out of Quito, deep into the picturesque heart of the Zuleta Valley, near Otavalo in the Imbarabura province - the beautiful rolling hills and patchwork fields were a relief from the hustle and bustle of the capital.

Complete with Stetson and knee-length half-chaps, I was introduced to my horse Ranchero, my new best friend and transport for the next two days.

He was a four-year-old mahogany brown horse with white socks who just loved to race. No matter if we were trekking up a steep-sided mountain or weaving between trees in an eucalypt forest, Ranchero wanted to do it all as fast as he possibly could.

Our base was a stunning colonial hacienda called La Merced Baja tucked away on the slope of the lush valley. The 500-hectare family-run farm has dozens of horses for all levels of rider and even a private bullring where bulls can be tested before fights.

I was keen to spend as much time riding as possible. So after a brief tour of the ranch, we saddled up and hit the trail.

Setting off at around 12.30pm at the height of the midday sun with two Ecuadorian guides leading the way and our English translator and riding expert Shirley at the rear, our route took us on a 15 kilometre round trip of the area, along dusty dirt roads and across wide verdant fields.

We climbed high up the Cayambe Mountain getting a breath-taking view out over the valley and keeping our eyes peeled for the Andean condors which inhabit the area. Sadly, they remained elusive during our five-hour trip.

Refined food in breathtaking settings at A Florestal

Located high in the hills of São Barão João, near Luz, Lagos, A Florestal boasts one of the most stunning settings a restaurant can have. And now that the warm weather has arrived, it is the perfect place for al-fresco lunches, or romantic meals on a balmy evening. Oh, yes, and the food is exceptional too...

Open for more than eighteen years, the restaurant is a favourite for both locals and foreign residents, many coming from afar to savour the culinary delights and splendid scenery that A Florestal has to offer. In winter the rustic farmhouse creates a cosy environment courtesy of a large open log fire, but really comes into its own at this time of year. The beautiful front terrace is awash with vivid Mediterranean flora, the rolling hills in the distance resembling a green carpet that flows out to the horizon.

The cosmopolitan menu is just as impressive. With light lunches, filling meals and Sunday brunches, it is as varied as it is International, with signature dishes from Mexico, the USA and Portugal.

Try the home-made tortilla chips with freshly chopped tomato salsa; a very tasty way to start the meal. Alternatively opt for a warm bread cake with some of the Chef's home-made pâté, the famous crème of pumpkin or French onion soup, or poached shrimp with a Thai dipping sauce.

If looking for a light lunch, the home-made wraps with a diversity of tantalising fillings are a great choice. Choose from vegetable stir-fry with cashew nuts, shrimp and chicken stir-fry, or a large selection of other fillings, all wrapped and presented on a bed of lettuce. For real meat lovers, be sure not to miss the freshly made hamburgers, thick and juicy and a favourite with regulars, as well as beef burritos or chicken fajitas.

Another favourite that clients come purposely for is A Florestal's boneless, succulent Piri Piri chicken.

Other main dishes include sweet and sour prawns, grilled rack of lamb, chicken breast with mango sauce, tuna steak, or breast of ducking with 'Gradia' plum sauce.

Sunday Brunches feature traditional UK and USA favourites, such as freshly baked English muffins, eggs Benedict, eggs Florentine, or steak and egg brunches.

The dessert menu is just as interesting, with a wide variety of unusual home-made sweets being the perfect end to your meal. Be sure not to miss the famous mousse cake, a treat for both the eyes and the taste buds.

A Florestal is run by John Hadden, and partner Karen, and business partner Sharlene Hadden. John is also A Florestal's resident chef, who established the restaurant after moving to Portugal from the States, where he lived for a number of years. The emphasis on quality deserves special acknowledgment, as well as the diversity that the different menus have to offer.

For more information or to make reservations, call A Florestal on: (+351) 282 687 204. Open Tuesday - Saturday, 12h00 - 14h30 and 19h00 - 22h00. Special Sunday Brunch is served from 12h00 - 15h00.

Mister Grilo Restaurant is a tricky place to find in Porches, but well worth the discovery. Not only well known to local residents, but also travellers from afar. The bar/waiting area is comfortable, often with an exhibition of local artists on display, and the Bistro dining room is painted with warm paint-washed walls with miniature palm trees and mosaic-tiled table-tops creating a lazy, sunny feeling as you sample the quite extensive menu. There are lovely sea and country views from the terrace, where you can try their delicious chicken 'cabidela' or octopus rice with coriander. A children's menu is available and there is live music on Thursdays.

Exquisitely-decorated with modern works of art, Bistro des Z'Artes restaurant in Almancil is co-owned by renowned chef Stanley Van Buren and Simon Visser Domus. Presentation is always of the highest level of professionalism, a must for Stanley, who believes that first impressions are most important as "food must look as good as it tastes". Together they produce unique dishes such as: Peanut Butter Soup with Baked Banana and Yellow Curry Soup with Lemon Grass and Coconut Milk. Whether you are a meat or a fish person the menu offers something to satisfy even the most discerning connoisseur.

Restaurante O Monte is located at Quinta Velha Cabanas in Cabanas de Tavira and your hosts Louis and Debbie welcome you to their old, farmhouse-style eatery. Their international team of chefs offer a mixed cuisine of traditional roasts, creole and eastern dishes at very good value. The interior of the spacious restaurant is decorated in pink and lilac presenting a chic yet cosy atmosphere. There is a large terrace surrounded by beautiful gardens, where you can relax and enjoy your meal, served by their smart and helpful staff, who speak French and Portuguese as well as English. Children have their own menu and you are advised to reserve your table rather than be disappointed.

The Karahi Indian Restaurant is tucked away in the small village of Vale Rabelho near Galé, which can be found by following the signs off the EN 125 at Guia. Your host Carlos Simão will be delighted to make the journey well worth while. Specializing in Tandoori, Karahi and Balti dishes they also offer to adapt a recipe to suit your individual requirements and have a wine list which includes not only a selection of Portugal's finest wines, but also from many other countries around the world. Dishes can even be home delivered. The restaurant is smart, airy and comfortable, with a small bar. Outside there is a terrace on which you can enjoy your meal during the warmer evenings and reservations are recommended.

The Blue Wave Beach Bar can be found at Cabanas Velhas Beach (between Burgau and Boca do Rio). Serving tasty sandwiches, various salads, fresh fish, house specialties, fish cataplana, chicken piri-iri and more! Combine your visit to the beach with a leisurely lunch and refreshing drink.

Shanghai Chinese Restaurant offers excellent quality, and only fresh produce in all its delicious dishes from Shanghai. These regional dishes are not found in other Chinese restaurants. Your hosts Wen and Ying, along with their friendly staff give a fast and efficient service, which includes take-away. They will even prepare your favourite special Chinese dish! Just give them time to make it. However, you might like to try their Sizzling Prawns with ginger and onion or maybe Canton Spicy Duck, or how about their sweet Thailand Fried Rice. They are easy to find, on the Almancil road going to Vale do Lobo - look out for the fishpond in the front.

Dolce Vita Restaurant Pizzeria is located in the centre of Lagos opposite the Cultural Centre, between two streets - with two different entrances! The decor inside is black and white, which gives a fresh clean look. Your host, António suggests you book a table so as not to miss his Stuffed Salmon with Seafood or Leg of Lamb served with a Red Wine and Rosemary Sauce, as well as traditional Italian dishes such as pizzas and pastas, and a variety of salads. The bar offers a wide selection of wines. All this at excellent value and staff who are friendly, smart and helpful! The atmosphere is relaxed and in summer you can enjoy eating outside on their rustic terrace amongst the shrubs and flowers, or at the front of the restaurant on the pavement watching the world go by.

English TV at the touch of a button

SOS Sky Digital is a highly successful, family-run company that prides itself on providing the highest quality products complemented by unbeatable customer service. Their range of satellite systems caters for all needs and budgets, putting you within the push of a button of your favorite UK programs.

Solidly established and covering the whole Algarve, SOS Sky Digital, established and run by Chris Whitman and wife Liz, is one of the region's leading satellite companies.

The Whitmans have been happily settled in the Algarve, in Burgau, with their daughter Harley, for over six years and know first hand how important an efficient and reliable service is.

Striving to be prompt, on time, never leaving until everything is clean and tidy and the customer is satisfied, the company offers full quality systems with prices starting from just €499.

However, should you prefer something a little more sophisticated, a supreme quality system with unbeatable viewing and highest standard definition is also available for €699.

Sky plus is also becoming increasingly popular and can be arranged for you without needing an English address. All quotes and prices are fully comprehensive; include equipment, installation and transportation, with no hidden extras. What you hear is what you pay.

Due to a number of changes SKY has made over the past year, some more popular signals may have occasionally weakened. As a result, many people have encountered problems in their viewing, particularly in the evening and at night. As always, SOS Sky Digital has the solution. The company has found that a 1.4 aluminum prime focus dish offers the advantage of better signal quality and strength, which means no losing programs at night. Furthermore, being a solid dish and stand, its quality is second to none and has a much longer lifespan, meaning that the extra €150 for the superior standard system is a good investment.

SOS Sky Digital can also be called upon for parts, official skyboxes, repairs, realignments, and sky packages. Always available for advice, their commitment to customer service, quality products and worry-free installations means excellent value for money and guarantees client satisfaction.

For more information, contact SOS Sky Digital on: (+351) 916 378 722, email: soskydigital1@msn.com, or see website: www.soskydigital.com.

A Systematik solution for all IT troubles

'Systematik' was established in November last year by English ex-pat Gareth Bromley to offer a fresh solution to all IT troubles. A small, young company, the company's personalised touch has proved highly popular, and it is in growing demand.

Gareth has always loved computers, ever since his dad bought his first one when Gareth was just 16. Whatever your computer's problem may be – a simple error message or a complex virus – when things look bleak, Systematik can sort them out! The fact that computers nearly always have logical solutions to all malfunctions is just one reason why Gareth enjoys his job; knowing that any challenge can be solved (with a little expert know-how).

Before moving to Portugal, Cheshire-born Gareth enjoyed a successful six-year career working as a computer engineer in the UK, lending his expertise to prominent companies including the National Health Service.

Thanks to the company's small dimensions they are capable of offering a fast response time, normally within the next 24 hours. This can include home visits and phone support, as well as Internet-based support, and covers the whole of the Algarve.

As well as fixing computer 'hiccups', Systematik also sell computer hardware, printer cartridges, and individual parts. They will install and ensure all units are working correctly, whether that is a complete computer or a small component.

An increasingly popular installation for ex-pats is broadband Internet, as it has many advantages for those staying abroad for whatever period of time to keep in touch with friends and family in the UK. It offers a quicker and simpler connection, has a fixed cost, is easy to install and is easy to use. Equally popular is wireless connection, allowing you to use your laptop anywhere in the house or around the garden or pool.

Another bonus is Systematik's network of partners across the Algarve and in the UK. This allows Gareth to interconnect websites and links so you can reach your e-mails, work contacts or office matters, anywhere, anytime of day, wherever they may be based. Take your work with you!

Graphics, website design and web hosting can also be catered for. For small business, Systematik offer an attractive support contract that, for a small monthly fee, comprises unlimited phone support and reduced fee on-site call outs. Systematik can also take care of company servers and Portuguese-registered domain names. All of Systematik's services are in fluent English, are cost effective and offer very competitive prices.

For more information, contact Systematik on: (+351) 282 768 224, e-mail: support@systematik.com, or see website: www.systematik.com.

Algarve Luxury Villas, pure perfection

Algarve Luxury Villas is a recently-established, five-star villa rental company that specialises in one simple thing: offering pure, undiluted luxury in the Carvoeiro area. Only the best is good enough. If you believe your property is special, in a class of its own, and would like to maximise your rental income by promoting your villa to an elite market, then this is the company to call.

Algarve Luxury Villas represents the epitome of perfection, reflecting the standard of its product. Each property signed to the books must be impeccable, of undoubted distinction, both inside and out.

Villas must comprise quality extras that elevate a superior property to one of unrivalled elitism; like underfloor heating, a heated swimming pool, sauna, Jacuzzi, etc. Furnishings and fittings must be of the highest quality and excellent taste.

To maintain utmost exclusivity, the number of properties the company will take on is limited, and each one must undergo a personal inspection carried out by the company directors, inside and out. Only the crème de la crème of the Carvoeiro area will be considered.

Founded by Lesley Turnbull and her husband Michael, this restriction has proved to entail a number of advantages.

Not only does it allow the company to be fully hands-on and within close proximity to all properties, should their presence or intervention be required, it also allows Algarve Luxury Villas to keep a well-trained eye on their properties, to ensure they are always up to standard. Before taking on villas, the couple will carry out pedantic inspections, making sure everything is 100 per cent compliant to their discerning expectations. No candle wax on furniture or cigarette stains on carpets or curtains will be tolerated.

The couple have first-hand experience in what villa management entails, having experienced both sides of the situation.

"We know that there is an elite market that is happy to pay luxury prices, but that is what they expect to get in return; luxury", Lesley explains, adding, "I think most of us know what it feels like to see something in a brochure and then be disappointed when in real life you don't get what you saw in the photographs".

Residents on the Isle of Man, the semi-retired couple and their two children spend nearly half of their time in Carvoeiro, where they have holidayed for the past 20 years. For the past year the Turnbells, who have significant past experience in commercial property rental and run successful businesses in the UK, have been fine-tuning Algarve Luxury Villas by testing the waters. It has already proved a highly sought-after service, and now the couple are ready to start selecting properties. These properties will be featured on Algarve Luxury Villas' website, which is advertised in a handpicked selection of prominent UK newspapers and publications.

"We are very passionate about this venture and believe in it 110 per cent", says Lesley.

For more information, contact Algarve Luxury Villas on: (+351) 282 356 592 or (+44) 1624 647 117.

Interview with Dr Ronald Charles Wolf

Dr. Ronald Charles Wolf and his family have been in Portugal since the early 1970's. They made their home in the historic city of Mafra, where Dr. Wolf, a highly experienced and vastly qualified lawyer, accumulated decades of law experience in Lisbon. He now offers law and loan counselling, as well as mortgage advice.

Nowadays, due to a new major highway, Mafra is only 25 minutes from Lisbon. Home to the 18th Century Palace of D. João V, it is also home to Dr. Ronald Wolf and his wife Maggie. On the outside of a small brownstone house in the heart of Mafra, is a sign that reads: 'Ronald Charles Wolf, Banif-Banco Internacional de Funchal, S.A.'

So what exactly does Dr. Wolf do? Is he a lawyer or a mortgage broker for the Portuguese bank Banif?

He explains: "Now I counsel people or companies who want loans but with a lawyer's vision."

The walls of his office are adorned with many diplomas from American universities, accreditations from American courts, even one that reads 'Master of Philosophy' from Manchester University, UK, obtained in 2001.

He came to Portugal as a lawyer from NY before the Portuguese revolution of 1974 "with two small children, an old car, dilapidated luggage and a useless law book on American taxation."

"How many people in Portugal in 1970 needed advice on American tax law?" he quizzes whimsically.

So what led Dr. Wolf to make the decision to move from the USA to Portugal?

"We were young", he explains, "We left America in search of another life. I was going to join a Madrid law firm but it was summer, hot, the partners went to Andalusia and told me to relax for two months. We came to Lisbon, and never returned to Madrid".

He continues, "Then the Portuguese Revolution of 1974 erupted. Many of the prominent lawyers went to Brazil or Switzerland. I wanted to leave. But Maggie believed in Portugal. People remember if you stay. I had a thriving law practice, not because of my intellect but because of Maggie's courage."

So when did he decide to go into the mortgage broker business?

"My clients decided for me. After years of law practise in Lisbon, today, I help clients from all walks of life, individuals and companies, seeking loans for their residential or commercial objectives. I bring to this work my decades of law experience. It is an advantage to the clients who receive my orientation and as Banif pays me and not the clients, it works out very well. Banks need depositors. But they also need borrowers. The borrowers use the money of depositors and pay for it. Therefore, banks, all banks, need to make loans. What they want are good loans. For this they pay to their promoters a reasonable compensation to present them with quality loan applications."

And the law practice?

"I am still counsel, but now to other lawyers. In the States we call it 'of counsel', the grey hairs that listen and advise, but the younger lawyers do the pleadings. And then there is an ironic twist to my professional life. People with family law problems prefer older lawyers. So there you are, I am obliged to mix finance with family. But then, isn't that what life is about? What family survives without funds and who needs funds if you have no family?"

Contact Dr. Ronald Wolf on: (+351) 933 170 313, fax: +351 261 819 544, e-mail: ronaldmarlyn@mail.telepac.pt, or see website: www.mortgage4portugalinvestments2.com.

An 11 page weekly guide to the latest and the best properties on the market in Portugal • The Portugal News • 28 Jul 2007

PROPERTY OF THE WEEK

Rustic Chic in São Brás

Located on the outskirts of the traditional town of São Brás, just a few minutes' drive from the centre and all amenities, is this grand, four-bedroom country manor. Positioned on a privileged plot of 10.000 square metres that overlooks the beautiful Serra do Caldeirão countryside, it is to be sold fully furnished and equipped.

Inside, the villa is excellently styled with a elegant 'rustic-chic' feel, comprising superior quality fixtures and fittings. It has a unique layout, the main living-area being divided over a series of split-levels, all rooms being capacious sized.

Through automatic gates an oversized paved drive sprawls around the villa, easily providing parking space for at least half a dozen large vehicles. A triple garage located beneath the kitchen offers extra parking.

Up a few steps we come to the main double entrance, which opens straight into the open-plan living area. Fronted with a series of patio doors and floor-to-ceiling windows that look out onto the vast pool patio, the spacious area is divided over three split-levels, being, from left to right, a games room, a lounge, and a dining area.

Whilst the lounge is centred around a traditional, rustic wood-burning fire, the games room is home to a snooker table. Positioned at either side of the lounge, the games room and dining area are slightly elevated.

Past the living area and down to the right of the villa is the kitchen – a beautiful room with an authentic country feel, fully equipped with modern appliances and rustic-looking units. Very spacious and light it comprises an eating area with a solid wood table and bench seating for 16 people, an outdoor patio area, and to the back of the kitchen there is a staircase that goes directly to the garage and laundry area.

At the opposite end of the villa are the four bedrooms, and additional living space, and a guest WC, all left from the main entrance.

The master bedroom, off from the games room, boasts a free-standing corner-salamander and a huge en-suite bathroom/dressing area. There are two separate walk-in closets, whilst the en-suite is made up of a hydromassage bathtub and shower cubicle, twin basins, a heated towel rack and a sauna cabin.

Two double-size bedrooms (one en-suite, one with a separate bathroom) and a single bedroom again with a separate bathroom make up the remaining sleeping areas. All have fitted wardrobes and windows.

An additional bonus is found in the form of a second living area.

Completely encased by floor-to-ceiling windows it is incredibly light and warm, like an oversized conservatory. It is divided into a TV viewing area, an office, and a second games area. The room is also perfect for entertaining.

Outside the gardens are well kept and low-maintenance.

The pool patio comprises a covered al-fresco seating/dining area, an outdoor fireplace, and a separate barbeque station, all positioned around a stunning heated infinity pool. All the way around the wide, elevated patio are additional seating areas from where you can enjoy superb birdseye views of the countryside.

Throughout the villa there is central heating, double glazing, and a full alarm system, blending country charm, excellent finishings, and modern equipment to offer a fabulous lifestyle. This property is priced at 895,000,00 euros. For more information contact: (+351) 281 381 956, or e-mail: info@manor-park.com

Gardening Briefs

BEST OF THE BUNCH - Astilbe

With their wispy plumes of tiny, starry flowers, these hardy perennials are an elegant, textural addition to any garden. Flowerheads, in a range of colours from red and pink to cream and white, are produced in summer and if left to fade turn to russet brown, extending the period of interest to autumn and winter. They like moist soil enriched with well rotted organic matter and should not be allowed to dry out in summer.

Plants should be divided in late winter or early spring every three to four years to keep them healthy.

GOOD ENOUGH TO EAT - Peas

Discover how much better fresh peas can taste than the frozen varieties,

Peas need non acid soil on an open site which hasn't grown peas for at least two seasons and you should dig the soil in autumn or early winter adding some compost.

Protect the crop from birds with twiggy branches or plastic netting and hoe regularly to keep the weeds under control. You will need support for the stems and the crop will need watering during dry weather.

A pod is ready for picking when it is well filled but there's still a little air space between each pea. Good wrinkled varieties include Alderman, Hurst Green Shaft and Kelvedon Wonder.

THREE WAYS TO... stop crops bolting

1. Keep soil moisture levels constant, as dry soil can encourage bolting, particularly with cauliflower, rocket and spinach.
2. Delay sowing cold-sensitive plants such as turnips, Swiss chard and endive until temperatures are more stable.
3. Choose bolt-resistant plants such as 'Boltardy' beetroot. Cultivars are particularly useful for early sowings of annuals such as spinach and for biennials such as onions and carrots.

WHAT TO DO THIS WEEK

- Sprinkle fertiliser around perennials and shrubs and hoe it into the soil.
- Thin out shoots of passifloras and bougainvilleas if they look tatty.
- Shorten long shoots on wisteria, cutting them back to around 30cm.
- Plant madonna lilies in good soil and a sunny spot.
- Thin vegetable seedlings to prevent overcrowding.
- Apply a liquid feed to your lawn when it is watered to give it a boost.
- Dig up and replant strawberry beds that are more than three years old.
- Pot up rooted cuttings in the greenhouse.
- Train in young and extending shoots of climbing and rambling roses.

WHAT'S IN STORE

by John & Madge Measures
Phyllostachys aurea, known in Portugal as Bambu aurea is often called the Fishpole or

Phyllostachys aurea

Golden Bamboo and it was commonly used here in Portugal for fishing rods. In the past they were carried on motor bikes the 'rod' carried with a piece of red cloth indicating its length of anything up to 10 metres long! Phyllostachys nigra that reaches a height of up to 5 metres is known here as Bambu nigra or the Black Bamboo with both of these bamboos becoming extremely popular as feature plants in gardens, especially as they add height to a border (and they are also useful for staking plants). Their leaves are long and thin and give a graceful backdrop in the garden, but do keep them in check by dividing the rhizomes in the spring as they can easily spread. They thrive well in full sun in a soil mixture that is rich in humus. Both these species will tolerate frost.

Myrtus communis 'tarentina' is a subspecies of the Common Myrtle that is more rounded and compact reaching a maximum height and width of 1.5 metres whereas the species communis is more likely to be up to 3 metres high and wide. The flowers that have a pinkish tinge are followed by white berries and are borne in late summer and autumn, and are up to 2 centimetres across. Native to our Mediterranean climate they need a well drained, moderately fertile soil mixture and to be grown in full sun. They will withstand temperatures as low as -5°C.

Solanum jasminoides 'Azul' is also known as the Potato Vine and is related to the potato and aubergine and like those plants must be treated with care as the foliage can cause digestive problems if eaten! It is a plant that 'scrambles' or climbs with support and needs to be grown in a good soil mixture that is well drained and in full sun. It does benefit from the application of liquid fertiliser on a monthly basis during the active growing season. Flowers, as the name suggests are blue, but with a white tinge and are borne during the late spring, summer and autumn. It can become rather 'leggy' and therefore needs to be pruned into shape after flowering. A native of Brazil it does need to be given protection in the winter months if the temperature is likely to drop below freezing.

Shopaholics of the world unite

There are hundreds of thousands of websites just waiting for you to buy from and there's the first problem - just how much time do you have to spend searching. (Photo: Press Association)

Patricia Davidson, author of The Shopaholics Guide To Buying Online, shares her tips and tricks - and favourite websites - for getting the most out of online fashion.

Cat-fights over the last pair of this season's must-have heels, heavy bags to cart around streets crawling with shoppers, and miles and miles of trekking from one trendy boutique to the next - shopping, who needs it?

"I think that most people would agree with me that shopping is one of the pleasures of life," smiles Patricia Davidson, author of The Shopaholics Guide To Buying Online.

"But the days when you used to have to trek out to the shops are now well past - just about everything is available online.

"In fact, there are hundreds of thousands of websites just waiting for you to buy from and there's the first problem - just how much time do you have to spend searching?"

Luckily for us, there is a much easier way than trawling through the thousands of options that your favourite search engine throws up - all you have to do is consult Davidson's guide to all the hidden gems that the internet has to offer.

"There are so many great online shops to discover - you can buy fashion, shoes, handbags, top brand cosmetics, skincare and gorgeous bath and body products, flowers, gifts, gadgets, food and wine online alongside the computers, printers, cameras, TVs, DVDs, books and CDs that you probably already know about," Davidson explains.

"You can book your tickets to the theatre, your flights to Venice and find out where to get your clothes altered.

"You can shop from anywhere in the world and take delivery anywhere in the world - the worldwide web has made the globe a much, much smaller place," she smiles.

Shoes To Party In

"And to go shopping in, run for the train in, go out to lunch in, go to the bar in, go simply anywhere in," Hutchinson enthuses.

"Like handbags, shoes say a lot about you - you need the right ones for you, for fashion, for what you're wearing, where you're going and the time of year."

www.dune.co.uk

Here you can buy from a range of trendy, affordable and stylish shoes and accessories including glitzy sandals, dressy pumps and flats, modern casual shoes and ballerinas, and excellent boots.

www.espadrillesetc.com

Whether or not you're an espadrilles fan, if you're going on holiday you really should take a look at this summer shoe website. They're also happy to ship anywhere in the world.

www.sand-monkey.com

If you fancy a change from run-of-the-mill synthetic flip-flops you should take a look at this collection of leather sandals. Originally designed on a luxury safari camp in Kenya's Masai Mara, these gorgeous shoes come complete with cute, stylish and funky finishes including beads and shells.

Baby and Toddler Clothes

"Here you can really have fun - you get to choose, every single time, whether you want to put your baby into frills and lace or the simplest of baby sleepsuits and no one can stop you," Hutchinson says.

www.bloomingmarvellous.co.uk

Blooming marvellous offer everything for the newborn baby, including sets of sleepsuits and vests in pink or blue, pointelle blankets, booties and padded outdoor suits.

www.gagagoogoo.co.uk

These are a range of baby and toddler t-shirts up to two-years and packs of bibs with famous and witty sayings such as 'Go ahead and make my day' (Clint Eastwood), 'Here's looking at you, kid' (Humphrey Bogart), and 'I have nothing to declare but my genius' (Oscar Wilde).

www.olipopops.com

The home of really cute baby soft shoes by Starchild and Bobux, enchanting bibs (before they've eaten!), and a selection of Hopscotch dressing up outfits and hats. A pretty, colourful and extremely busy website with lots of unusual products.

Gorgeous Gifts

"There are so many wonderful websites online where you can find all sorts of pampering gifts, from luxurious and unusual scented candles to the softest handmade bath robes and embroidered jewellery rolls."

This is a mixture of well-priced pampering gifts including candles by Arco, bath melts and truffles by Di Palomo, beautiful blankets and throws, and even pretty festive accessories for the home.

www.serendipbeauty.com

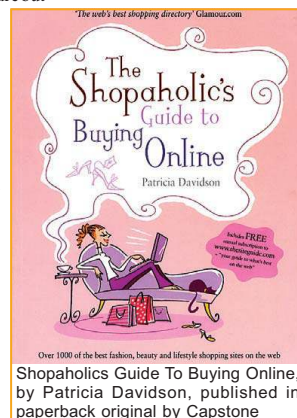

Next time you're looking for a pampering/beauty gift website which is also a pleasurable and relaxing shopping experience, then just click on to this new website to find products from Burt's Bees, Cowshed, Fruits and Passion, Jane Packer, Korres, and Tocca.

www.bombayduck.co.uk

This is a very pretty home gifts and interiors website with a wide range of ideas from their own beautifully packaged candles and candy-coloured leather accessories, crystal glass chandeliers, vintage style bathroom accessories and printed cushions.

Calling all artists to Artists Awake

During the month of September this year acclaimed local artists Den Miles and Rafaela Sousa are to stage an 'Affordable' art exhibition, and are calling on all artists to participate in the unique event.

An entry fee of just one euro (€1 – to be donated to UNICEF) will be charged, and all paintings will be sold for €25.

Paintings must be 21cm x 30cm in size and signed only on the reverse side, giving intrigue to the buying public.

Den and Rafaela would like to extend an invitation to people from all walks of life, i.e. celebrities, artists, non-artist, the young and the old, in fact anyone, who would like to exhibit their works of art.

The dates of the event are yet to be confirmed.

However, if you would like to participate, or want more information, contact Den Miles on: (+351) 968 740 970, or Rafaela on: (+351) 282 354 189 or 916 072 342.

The Trials of Tricia Blake by Lisa Selvidge

'A gritty tale of love, hate, and murder, set in 1979 following the winter of discontent in Britain when kids sang about bricks in walls and hated Mondays. Tricia Blake, age 14, commits a terrible crime.'

Ever been pushed to your limit and thought about taking the law into your own hands? The tale of Tricia Blake is one of a young teenager who finds herself in an unbearable situation. Her mother has remarried, to a man who Tricia views as a narrow minded and malicious bully. He finally pushes Tricia's endurance too far when, out of pure spite, he sells the pony she won in a competition without her permission.

Being an independent, spirited sort of girl, she doesn't stay around long enough to let herself become damaged beyond repair – she runs away. Tricia's life then unfolds in a roller coaster ride which takes her away from her suburban life, stressed out mother and bullying stepfather, to London, where fate seems to be urging Tricia on to taking unlawful action against the man she loathes.

Having a strong survival instinct, Tricia manages to find a room in a flat and a job in a pizza parlour. Her adventures bring her into contact with some dodgy characters; she briefly becomes an artist's model, mixes with lads dealing in drugs, and more... until she is ready to do what she set out to do.

This is a work of fiction aimed at a teen market but, as an adult reader, I was pleased and almost surprised at how the story kept me coming back for more. Perhaps it's because the characters are so convincing and well thought out that you get the feeling that these people really could exist and be living not far from you.

As for entertaining teenagers, the book has to succeed: the world of grown-ups penetrates Tricia's life with a speed that might leave an adult gasping for breath, but which most teens are ready and waiting for.

A thoroughly good read for teens and adults alike.

LIVE CONCERTS

Elvis Costello & Allen Toussaint band

Elvis Costello is an English musician, singer, and songwriter. Costello was an early participant in London's pub rock scene in the mid-1970s, and later became associated with the punk rock and new wave musical genres, before establishing himself as a unique and original voice in the 1980s. His output has been wildly diverse: One critic has written that "Costello, the pop encyclopedia, can reinvent the past in his own image".

July 31st, The Lake Resort in Vilamoura from 10pm. Tickets €30.

Lionel Richie

Lionel Brockman Richie, Jr. is a Grammy Award-winning American R&B and soul singer, Academy Award-winning songwriter, record producer, and occasional actor who needs no introduction. See him live at the Pine Cliffs Resort Summer Gala. The resort will be commemorating its 15th anniversary to the current sounds of rock & blues music.

August 1st, Pine Cliffs Resort, Albufeira from 7pm. Tickets: €300 concert and dinner.

Music in the Patio with Barakuka

Music band led by local singer / songwriter Beto Kalulú accompanied by several Angolan friends. This concert has promised to be tropical, colourful with contagious African beats, organizers have said. Beto Kalulú, known for his vast music skills in the Algarve, is expected to get the crowd going with his ability to get party-goers interacting with the concert itself.

August 1st, Lagos Cultural Centre Patio from 10pm. Entrance is free.

Mariza

After five years, Mariza is set to return to the picturesque town of Tavira on August 4th, followed by Cristina Branco on August 8th, Mind da Gap on August 12th, Carlos Barretto and 'In Loko' and the Algarve Orchestra on September 15.

August 4th, Convento do Carmo in Tavira.

Keane

Keane are an English piano rock band, first established in Battle, East Sussex in 1995, taking their current name in 1997. The group is comprised of composer, bassist, and pianist Tim Rice-Oxley, lead vocalist Tom Chaplin and drummer Richard Hughes. Keane are known for using a piano as their lead instrument instead of guitars, significantly differentiating them from most rock bands.

August 3rd, Parque da Cidade in Oporto from 9pm. Tickets: €25 - €30.

Sudoeste Festival

The Sudoeste (southwest) Festival is the biggest music summer festival in Portugal. It is held every year at the beginning of August at Zambujeira do Mar, Alentejo. It was first held in 1996. Placed in a quiet area which is reachable by car or a mix of train and coach the only thing you might regret is not having more time to stay after the festival is finished. The organization provides free transport from the festival site to Zambujeira (3 to 5km away). Good music, good people, good mood, and great places to visit, makes Sudoeste summer festival a great festival all in one.

This year's line up includes:

Aug 2nd: Damien Marley; Editors; I'm From Barcelona; Gilberto Gil; Mayra Andrade; Cassius; Rui Vargas; Camera Obscura; Noisettes; Ojos de Brujo.

Aug 3rd: Cypress Hill; The Cinematics; Just Jack; Outlandish; Armandinho; Buraka Som Sistema; Mary Ann Hobbs; Bonde do Relê; Datarock; Balla; Os Lambas; Nastio; General Levy & Robbo; Ranx; Steel Pulse; Soldier of Jah Army; Mani3stos.

Aug 4th: Groove Armada; The Streets; Sam The Kid; Sérgio Godinho; Koop; The Australian Pink Floyd Show; Nature of Human Art; Air Traffic; Patrick Wolf; Sondre Lerche; Sonic Junior; Vanessa da Mata; Tiago Bettencourt; Eta Carinae; Sounds Portugueses; Saia Sup Crew; Martin Jondo; Stepacide.

Aug 5th: James; Mika; Phoenix; Razorlight; Babylon Circus; The National; Of Montreal; Trail of Dead; Tara Perdida; 2008; Rui Vargas; Stereo Addiction; Pow Pow Movement; Tiken Jah Fakoly.

Tickets: €40 one day pass, €70 four day pass including camping.

Pirates of the Caribbean: At World's End

After eighteen sessions, four hundred episodes and innumerable awards and honours, 23 Emmys and a designation from Time magazine as the best television show of the 20th century, The Simpsons has become a feature-length motion picture. Starring in The Simpsons Movie are series regulars Dan Castellaneta, Julie Kavner, Nancy Cartwright, Yeardley Smith, Hank Azaria, Harry Shearer, Pamela Hayden and Tress MacNeille.

Albert Brooks also stars. In the film, Homer must save the world from a catastrophe he created.

It all begins with Homer, his new pet pig and a leaky silo full of droppings, a combination that triggers a disaster Springfield has never experienced. As Marge is outraged by Homer's monumental blunder, a vengeful mob descends on the Simpson household. The family narrowly escapes, and is soon divided by both location and conflict.

The calamity triggered by Homer draws the attention of U.S. President Arnold Schwarzenegger (voiced by Harry Shearer) and Environmental Protection Agency head Russ Cargill (voiced by Albert Brooks). As the fates of Springfield and the world hang in the balance, Homer embarks on a personal odyssey of redemption, seeking forgiveness from Marge, the reunion of his splintered family, and the salvation of his hometown.

Ashley Judd stars as a lonely waitress in this study in fear and paranoia from director William Friedkin. Aggie lives a largely solitary life in Oklahoma, haunted by a sad past and hounded by her ex-con ex-husband (Harry Connick, Jr.). When a female friend and occasional lover introduces Aggie to Peter (Michael Shannon), it seems she has found her match. The pair enters into a cautious romance, but their dark natures fuel more than just passion. Peter reveals that he was a victim of government experimentation that left blood-hungry aphids crawling under his skin, and the couple begins to obsess over the idea that they could be infected by the insects.

Based on Tracy Letts's play, Bug is an effective psychological thriller that gets under the audience's skin. Though the film never takes advantage of the freedom of the screen versus the confines of the stage, setting the action almost entirely within the walls of Aggie's hotel room evokes a claustrophobic feeling.

Shannon deftly reprises his role from the stage play with a squirm-inducing mass of ticks and twitches, but it's Judd who deserves the bulk of the praise. With her role as Aggie, she leaves behind roles such as the romantic comedy lead of Someone Like You or the revenge-seeking heroine of Double Jeopardy. Instead, she's alternately proud and insecure, fully immersing herself in the part of a woman unlike anyone she has played before. Though Friedkin helmed two of the most notable films of the 1970s with The Exorcist and The French Connection, he hasn't directed many critical successes since. But with its similarities to the moody work of Roman Polanski, this film could represent a return to form for the veteran director.

The Warrior is set in 18th-century Kazakhstan, a vast, pitiless region of austere and terrible beauty, and tells the story of a boy who is destined to one day unite the three warring tribes of the country who have survived and fought for centuries, against invaders, against their formidable enemies and amongst themselves. Starring Jay Hernandez, Bai Ling, Kuno Becker, Mark Dacascos and Jason Scott Lee.

Coming Soon

Ray Keene (John Cusack), a father who wants to redeem himself in the eyes of his son, is trying to bring Cordell (Morgan Freeman), a world-class assassin to justice. All the while, he must protect his son and evade the assassin's team who are methodically hunting them down in the wilderness.

CELEB NEWS

Singer Beyoncé Knowles has promised to fly two injured fans to a future concert and treat them to VIP backstage treatment, after they were injured during a recent gig. Kind-hearted Knowles rushed to a St. Louis, Missouri hospital after her show in the city on Sunday to visit the fans, who were injured when a pyrotechnics display went awry and they were showered with fire. The 25-year-old singer made an unannounced visit at the Barnes-Jewish Hospital, where she spent 45 minutes with the injured pair - and now the singer has promised to fly each fan and a friend to a gig of their choosing, where they'll be granted access backstage. Her manager-father Mathew Knowles says, "She's going to make it up to them in a huge way and fly them and a guest to one of her shows - to be backstage". «(»»» Hollywood pals Ben Affleck and Matt Damon are writing their first screenplay together since 1997 hit Good Will Hunting. The pair were unknowns when they wrote and starred in the critically lauded movie, which won them an Academy Award for Best Screenplay in 1998. Since their success they have mostly gone their separate ways, with Affleck starring in blockbuster Armageddon and Damon in The Bourne Identity and its sequels. They are currently enjoying a joint holiday with their families in Hawaii - but are finally keen to team up again. Damon's spokesperson tells the New York Daily News, "That's their plan. Whether or not they are doing it right now, I don't know". «(»»» Heroes star Zachary Quinto may be set to play Spock in the new Star Trek movie, according to media reports. Quinto, who plays Syla in the hit TV show, is reported to be in final discussions to play iconic sci-fi character Spock for the new Star Trek film. Lost creator J.J. Abrams has been lined up to direct the movie, which will be released next year. «(»»» Tsotsi director Gavin Hood is set for a change of pace after signing up to direct X-Men spin-off Wolverine. The South African filmmaker will direct Australian actor Hugh Jackman as the lone-wolf superhero, who last appeared in 2006's X-Men: The Last Stand. Troy screenwriter David Benioff will write the screenplay for the movie, which is expected to hit screens next year. «(»»» Rarely seen home movies from the personal collections of Hollywood legends like Alfred Hitchcock and Steve McQueen are to air as part of a one-night film festival in Hollywood. The Academy Of Motion Picture Arts And Sciences will present Hollywood Home Movies: Treasures From The Academy Film Archive next month. A spokeswoman for the event says, "Hollywood Home Movies will feature excerpts of at-home, on-vacation and behind-the-scenes set activities captured by stars and directors from Hollywood's Golden Age." The short film festival will also feature vintage news footage about the construction of Los Angeles City Hall in 1926 and a documentary about Hollywood Boulevard, shot in 1947. «(»»»

The ups and downs of the doggy world

First a very up of the doggy world. On August 1st Sandy, one of our Old English Sheepdogs reaches the very grand old age of 14 years old. Unheard of amongst my OES owning friends. There will be a lot of TLC for Sandy next week, well more TLC than her normal ration!!!

Anyone who knows me, knows that Sandy has battled over those years, especially the last 5 years. On one of our trips down here, (we drove down 4 times a year) within 15 mins of our arrival she had stomach torsion. I had never seen one, or in fact heard of them, yes in horses but not dogs. I never want to see one again. You have a very short window of time to save the dog. Luckily we were already registered with our Vet here, we rang them on the emergency number, on hearing Sandy screaming they said to bring her straight down. It took us 7 mins to get there, by now Sandy was frothing at the mouth and screaming in agony with a very high temperature. Thanks to the care of the Vets, (thank you to Claudia, Rachel and Clare on the EN125) and the speed with which they acted, Sandy came through. It could easily have gone the other way. Jim and I are convinced that had it happened in the UK, due to the traffic, we would not have made it to our Vets in less than 40 mins, Sandy would not have been alive by then.

Her next challenge was a lump on a back leg, it came up fast, within two weeks. This was Christmas 2002. Off to the Vets who removed it, taking a large amount of muscle. The results of the tests proved it was a spindle cell carcinoma, usually fatal my Vet in the UK informed me, then said it will come back. It has and has been removed, I think, 3 times now. November 2003 she was diagnosed with Hypothyroidism and severe Hip Dysplasia and given, at best, another 3 months before she would be unable to walk. So, here we are in 2007, she can still walk, yes it is a challenge at times, tiled floors are the worst for dodgy hips. She cannot get up the stairs now but has adapted to that - she barks at the bottom of the stairs for attention if we are all upstairs. She sometimes puts her front legs on the bottom step, but it would be tough for her to climb up now, I think she knows that. But, those Vets in the UK who gave her the 3 months, did not take into account my determination to research and help her coupled with her determination to keep going. She is on very effective medication which we can top up if we have to. She can run the length of the house very fast for her dinner and a Bonio and has taken to wandering around the land checking all her old haunts out. 18 months ago she was diagnosed with heart problems, more pills. But, she is happy, she leads a quiet, sleepy life, she tolerates all the furry youngsters in the house and every evening joins them for their ball games. It is a joy to see her running up and down the lawn, yes she doesn't catch the ball, but she never did, she was never a ball lady!! She barks at the youngsters as they belt around her.

Wasps, they have featured very high on our list of dislikes this week, especially Merlin and I. Not only did Cleo, Merlin and I fancy a swim in the week, but the wasps joined us. I was stung badly many times on my arms and Merlin has been stung on his face near his eye, resulting in a white patch on his black muzzle. It looks very strange and will cause a few funny looks at the show in Sintra at the weekend.

We then all abandoned the pool and declared it a no go area. But, we all then had the most fun of the week. I decided to clean the pool waterproof mattresses, this of course involved the hosepipe.

Well, I am surprised my house was not reported to the GNR for excess noise by the nearest village. Two hours it took me with the help of 4 dogs, yes Sandy joined in. They were running around the terrace, jumping at the water from the hose pipe and barking madly. It was very entertaining, and very noisy.

The PWDs were the worst it has to be said, they seemed to think I wanted them to run all around the lawn and then over the clean mattresses - result, muddy footprints on the clean yellow. Obviously I ended up with 4 very wet dogs and banned them from the house for the rest of the day whilst they dried. It bought back so many memories for me as this happened the day of the two year anniversary of loosing Lennie, this hosepipe game was Lennie's favourite so it was a poignant couple of hours. How strange that I decided to do it that day.

Moral of this story, have fun and avoid the wasps!!!

Dogs & Horses

One of the main events on the doggie and horsey calendar in the Algarve happened at the Pinetrees Riding Centre in Almancil on Sunday. Every year Pinetrees celebrate their birthday, this year their 22nd, with the amazing Horse and Hounds event, each year raising funds for local charities. This year's charities were ECRA

Search and Rescue and the Bombeiros Voluntários de Faro. The event was sponsored by Merrylegs Pet Resort and Clínica Veterinária de Torrejão in Areiro, near Loulé, with additional prizes offered by Paws 4 Pets in Silves, Yamura and Purina. There were 50 participants making up teams of one rider and horse with one dog and handler. The horse and rider went first over a series of jumps followed by their team-mates of dog and handler who completed an agility course. Each teams (horse and dog) round was timed and the top three of each of the three groups were awarded prizes. This provided a lot of fun for the spectators, who were entertained for over three hours. During the interval the ECRA Search and Rescue team showed the spectators how skilled their dogs were at searching for people.

These dogs are highly trained and are used to search for people after earthquakes or building collapses, and can be used for numerous other searches. Over 1000€ was raised this year for the charities. The money will be put towards protective suits for the Bombeiros and ECRA handlers and for specials harnesses for the ECRA dogs.

Please can we say a big thank you to Pinetrees Riding Centre in Almancil, Merrylegs Pet Resort and Clínica Veterinária de Torrejão in Areiro, near Loulé, Paws 4 Pets in Silves, Yamura and Purina. An extra special thank you goes to all the participants who all did so well, and thank you also to their four legged friends. If you did not make it this year then we hope that you will make it to a future Horse and Hound event.

British Film Forever (BBC2, 9.05pm)
Anybody who watched the last series of The Culture Show will already be aware that the BBC has been planning a season of British movies for some time. Lauren Laverne and Mark Kermode seemed to mention it every five minutes, but until now, those of us desperate for it to begin have been wondering if we've dreamed the whole thing. Well, have no fear, the start is upon us at last & it sounds like it's been worth waiting for. As well as broadcasting some of the most memorable films ever produced in the UK, the season will include this seven-part series. Each edition focuses on a different genre, beginning with an insight into thrillers. There have been many memorable entries into the canon over the years, with master of suspense Alfred Hitchcock contributing some of the best before his move to Hollywood. But it was in the 1960s that the British thriller really came into its own thanks to the James Bond franchise and Michael Caine's performances as downbeat spy Harry Palmer. Since then, the likes of The Long Good Friday, Get Carter and Shallow Grave have gone down a treat with audiences worldwide. Here, Jessica Hynes narrates the genres development, while Caine, Bob Hoskins, Richard E Grant, Daniel Craig and Guy Ritchie offer their opinions.

Mountain (BBC1, 9pm)

Hens already saved some of the nation's most precious historical buildings from ruin and carved his name in the comedy hall of fame. Now Griff Rhys Jones is keen to show us that hens also quite the action-man. The presenter is undertaking an incredible journey as he travels the length of the UK on the country's highest mountain peaks. He begins his exploration in the wilderness of the north-west Highlands of Scotland. Nowhere else in the country makes the visitor feel more like an explorer, as Griff finds out when he steps onto a frozen wilderness closer to the Arctic Circle than London. The mountains seem to be a very hostile landscape, yet, many years after the Vikings left, these Highlands were home to half of Scotland's population. However, today the area is only marginally more populated than the Sahara. To try to understand what the mountains mean to those who live here, Griff meets a crofter trying to encourage people back to the land, an innovative artist who settled here because of its emptiness, and, on the Isle of Skye, he explores a mountain range that is privately owned, and up for sale. The series is part of the BBCr's Ultimate Outdoors season.

Pick of the Day

Diana: Last Days of a Princess (five, 9pm)

As controversial as Princess Diana was in her life, the theories, speculation and rumours that have surrounded her death far outweigh any publicity she could have sparked had she survived. A murder plot, a royal cover-up and a paparazzi infringement are among the many theories put forward as people have tried to make sense of her untimely demise. A year after her divorce from Prince Charles, Diana was pursuing her new-found freedom with vigour, and had begun a romance with Harrods heir Dodi Fayed. This docudrama charts the couple's last whirlwind days, as they enjoyed Fayed's private jets, multi-million-pound yacht and endless entourages. It also includes interviews with Dodi's father, Mohamed Al Fayed; Kez Wingfield, a bodyguard present in Paris around the time of Dianans accident; and Myriah Daniels, Dodi's masseuse. So much has already been said about Dianans life, love and death, so what makes this particular version worth watching? Well, Myriah Daniels has never spoken publicly about her relationship with the pair before, and Kez Wingfield's only previous TV interview was given in 1988. The programme also includes sections of the Paget report, which was released after a four-year investigation by the Metropolitan Police. Will the show answer any of our burning questions? Most likely not, but it will give yet another fascinating insight into the people's beloved Princess.

Pick of the Day

Cape Wrath (C4, 10pm)

Maybe it's the fact that his facial hair is modelled so closely on dear old Seth from Emmerdale, or perhaps it's his tendency to jump on people's heads while wearing football boots, but there's something about Wintersgill that the residents of Meadowlands just don't trust. He is frustrated when he informs the residents of Jack's apparently mysterious past at a meeting, but key members of the community fail to believe his story. Meanwhile, Zoe gets a shock when she discovers the handymans corpse and Evelyn begs York not to tell Danny about the results of the test. This dark and disturbing tale of suburban life gone horribly wrong is gathering pace and David Morrissey does a superb job holding things together in the central role. Whether this British offering becomes a must-watch series to rival the best American imports, or is dismissed as silly fare and mentally filed alongside Twin Peaks, remains to be seen. It's certainly gathering plenty of fans, who all have their own ideas about what's really going on behind the seemingly perfect facade of the witness protection village.

Pick of the Day

David Beckham's Soccer USA (five, 7.15pm)

If there's anything you don't know about Americans new football league, so-called Major League Soccer, this weekly magazine programme will soon put you right. It takes an in-depth look at the game in the States to coincide with David Beckham's move to LA Galaxy, where the star will try to raise the profile of the world's most popular sport in a country where it is still relatively unknown. Huge stars like Pele, Bobby Moore, Franz Beckenbauer and Rodney Marsh tried and failed to get the game going in the US in the 1970s, but will Beckham have any more joy? In this second instalment, the former England captain provides all the latest news and gossip from another week in the US, including highlights of the game against top Mexican team, Club Deportivo Guadalajara. CD Guadalajara are one of the biggest teams in Mexico and will be a big challenge for Beckham's new side. The match forms a part of the inaugural SuperLiga, a competition between four MLS clubs and four Mexican Premier League sides. But how will England's very own football legend fair?

Pick of the Day

True Dare Kiss (BBC1, 9pm)

It's the final episode of this drama, and there's nowhere left for the family members to hide as skeletons long hidden away come tumbling out of the closet. Stan continues to make his preparations as his children try to come to terms with his sudden reappearance. Phil is too preoccupied with his father's return to think about what she needs to do next, while her dad begins to torment Nita, by appearing outside her house and taunting her on the telephone. Beth and Phil decide to send Alice to find out what he is up to, but when Beth is left alone with Kaz, she's forced to face some uncomfortable truths as her husband confronts her about his so-called accident. Meanwhile, Dennis's agoraphobia becomes too much and he jumps into a JCB and crashes it into the house on Smyrna Grove, in a desperate attempt to get inside. Nash arrives to assess the scale of the damage and Nita, Phil Beth and Alice take off in hot pursuit of Dennis. But they have more to worry about than a semi-destroyed property when Stan decides it's time to reveal all about the family's past.

Pick of the Day

The Friday Night Project (C4, 10.30pm)
From beautiful actress Mischa Barton, to comedy genius David Walliams, Justin Lee Collins and Alan Carr have been treated to many stars since they began this hilarious entertainment show. Having dressed up with Chris Moyles and taken dance lessons with Paula Abdul, you have to wonder just what else the pair are going to put themselves through in the name of fun. In this instalment, it's Absolutely Fabulous star Joanna Lumley's turn in the hot-seat, and you can be sure she will give the boys a run for their money. She will provide the opening monologue, before inviting Alan and Justin to delve deep into her unique celebrity world, including her comedy and drama achievements. The glamorous actress will then face a no-holds-barred question session from the studio audience, from which there will nowhere for her to hide, before participating in the comedy sketches and strands that have helped to make this show a hit. Sherrill also face the panel game Who Knows the Most about the Guest Host?, and will present Alan's topical comedy news desk Friday Night News.

Digital Satellite Systems
Portugal Official authorised SKY agent

Digital Satellite Systems supply a complete range of satellite equipment throughout the Algarve direct from our premises in Albufeira. We supply Sky digiboxes, freeview digiboxes, all satellite dish sizes, Inbs, Sky cards, RTE Irish cards, digitalb cards, art sport cards, football systems, multiswitches, cable etc, etc. Sky subscription packages organised free at time of installation.

- Authorised Sky agents ■ All BBC, ITV channels free ■
- Sky contract cards ■ Check out the picture quality ■
- Sky freesat cards ■ Sky HD demonstration on display ■
- Check out our premises ■ All major credit cards accepted ■
- Sky contracts activated to existing Sky digiboxes ■

Please note due to the reduction in signal quality to receive Sky, BBC, ITV, Channel 4, Channel 5 etc, 1.3m or 1.33m dishes are not giving the same level of reception to retain these channels all day, however digital satellite systems now supply a new 1.4m high gain dish to combat these losses of reception. Come along to our showroom and see for yourself.

IMPORTANT NOTICE: Some Sky digibox suppliers are charging a "Sky Card Annual maintenance fee" usually €100 and then €100 per year. Digital Satellite Systems are authorised sky agents and cannot and do not charge this add on fee.

Upward Glance

with Joyce Voelker

The Same Old Story

Recently I read about a pastoral candidate at a particular church in the United States. Hoping the church would vote to invite him to come pastor their church, he prepared and preached an impressive sermon. Hearing him preach, the congregation felt that he understood and spoke to the deepest needs of their hearts. What he shared was exactly what their church life needed. Best of all, he was nothing like the pastor they had recently pressured to leave their little fellowship. The young man received a unanimous vote and was invited to become their new pastor. The people looked forward to hearing more from this talented preacher.

Moving his family to their town it was soon time for his first Sunday sermon. Everyone was a bit surprised when the young preacher gave the same sermon he had given when visiting several months earlier. They were even more surprised and confused when he preached it again the next week. After the third week of hearing exactly the same message, annoyance replaced confusion. The church leadership met with their new pastor demanding to know what was going on.

Undaunted by their questions and concerns, the young pastor answered the leadership confidently. Imagine their shock when he calmly responded: "I know what I am doing. Trust me. When you start living out this sermon, I will go on to my next one."

As I read the Old Testament

I am amazed at how often God's chosen people turned away from Him, continually disobeying and following after false gods. I've read about God's punishment and yet I have seen His readiness to forgive over and over again. Their sinful lifestyles disgust me until God gently taps me on the shoulder and says, "Look in the mirror, Joyce. Aren't you just like them?"

Jesus' sermons when he walked this earth had a reoccurring theme. It should not surprise us that He wanted to be sure people understood what was required of them as His followers. The lifestyle and worldview Jesus taught was completely contrary to their way of thinking. It stood in stark contrast to even the teaching of the day's religious leaders. He spoke repeatedly about forgiveness, servanthood and unconditional mercy, love and grace.

In our Christian journey God cannot continue to share new and deeper truths with us until we obey what we have already heard from Him. No sermon or devotional reading is complete until it is put into practice.

"Do not merely listen to the word, and so deceive yourselves. Do what it says."
James 1:22

Letters, from p. 19

Conscience

SIR, I wrote this poem a few years ago with the idea of sending it to you for publication, as I'm sure that there are a lot of us 'old ones' with a certain amount of conscience now that they have time to reflect. I am one of those.
R.L. (not him, next village!)

I laze in the sun, while the world goes on by
I move my position, and gaze at the sky
Perhaps it's me, and I'm just thinking a while
I reflect on my life, and give a wry smile

The things from the past, keep knocking me down
They fire me with guilt, round and around
And they hit where it hurts, in the soul that's not there and I murmur alone, what I did, wasn't fair

The ghosts from the past haunt me, night until day
A smouldering conscience keeps gnawing away
I'm so sorry right now, was it really all me,
Does this demon appear, then suddenly flee?

So I pretend it's not me, if it eases the pain
But I know in my heart, it was, ...once again
Is that other me so cruel, could it really be?
As though I was blind, it didn't happen, you see!

Was I so different then, was I terribly cruel
Did the others not count, while I was playing the fool
As I look back now, would I change any, you bet!
And I wouldn't be filled with this ache, and regret

Now I'm an old man, and my loved ones are gone
I regret and regret, but it keeps going on
The repeat of remorse keeps pounding my heart
I'll live it again, and again, til the final depart

If you're reading this now, don't do as I did
Blame it on what happened when you were a kid
Give thanks for your life, and be satisfied
And save all those souls, that cried. Cried. And died.

I'm suffering now, and deserve to do so
My thoughts hammer at me, and deliver the blow
I wait for the reaper, he's only next door
Then I won't exist on this earth any more...thank God!

All our worlds

SIR, Wonderful, eh? You can come here (or at least there - the UK that is) but don't bother bringing your culture with you. (Carole Beranek - Letters 21-7-07) It shows such a splendid grasp of culture, and such generosity too.

And assuming Ms. Beranek to be no hypocrite, and certainly not to practise double standards, we must expect that she advocates

Christians who travel to foreign homelands must drop their culture and become.....Zoroastrian, Sufi, Muslim, whatever. Some faith. She must at very least be Roman Catholic now, writing from Cascais.

Well, I'm proud to have nothing to do with such Christian imperialism. And don't get me wrong. I have Christian friends with whom I delight in playing music. I help organize our carol concerts: they no doubt get a different significance from the carols - BUT they also join in our old folk songs and wassails. It doesn't make them pagan nor me Christian. And in my last employment I was in charge of training personal counsellors, and was astonished to find after 2-3 months that 2-3 of the (mature) students were Christians but dared not express it. I'm proud that I helped them to gain confidence in their faith and use it openly and actively.

But then comes the danger. When we in the 'First World' re-discover the strength of some of our heritage we often also need some more sensitivity too, or we risk offending many from less advantaged cultures. It's easy to slip into an aggressive evangelism, or cultural disdain, which creates buccaneers like Bush, and his personal jihad (now dismally failed), and in turn they generate more terrorism.... Thanks, George.

Living in the UK now immerses you not in a Christian homeland, but in a multicultural society. And the challenge is to understand and mutually support one another. (Actually I thought that fitted fairly well with Christian values too!) I have a dear friend who is deeply Jewish - yet he trusts me enough to invite me to celebrate Seder (Passover) with him. He knows that I will denounce passionately the Zionist policies which the Israeli state pursues. I am sure that it will make many Jews condemn me as anti-semitic. But it ain't true.

Let's see if we can all help to understand one another's culture, and in the process defuse the militants' fire. And letters seeking a way back in time to an exclusive Christian society 300 years past are best addressed to Dr. Who, c/o The BBC, rather than The Portugal News.

S.WEBSTER, Vale Fuzeiros
Our apologies again for the typing mistake (now picked up in the above letter) in Carole Beranek's letter last week - 300 years should have been 30 years. Ed

Benfica sell captain Simão

Benfica confirmed yesterday (Thursday) they had agreed terms with Spanish giants Atletico Madrid for the transfer of their inspirational captain Simão Sabrosa for a fee estimated to be in the region of 20 million euros.

Simão Sabrosa, a Portuguese international whose appearances have often been limited by the presence of either Luís Figo or Cristiano Ronaldo in the line-up is moving to Madrid only days after Benfica said its player was "non-negotiable".

Sabrosa had been on the verge of a move to Liverpool 18 months ago, but the deal broke down when Benfica asked for an additional two million euros from the English club.

Manchester United had also been linked to the player, but after their swoop for Nani and Anderson in the off-season, joining forces with Ronaldo and assistant manager Carlos Queiroz became unlikely.

A product of Sporting, Simão Sabrosa spent three inconsistent seasons at Barcelona between 1999 and 2001 before returning to Lisbon to play for Benfica.

Fernandes races for fourth World Cup win of 2007

After a brief hiatus from World Cup racing, recent European Champion Vanessa Fernandes will be back this Sunday to take on the best triathletes in the world at the 2007 Salford BG Triathlon World Cup in England.

Hoping to keep her number-one ranking, Fernandes will face-off against five of the top-10 women and 50 others in the tenth stop of the 2007 BG Triathlon World Cup Series. A win this weekend will move Fernandes to within two of the all-time record for world cup wins and secure her hold on first in the world rankings.

It is a strong women's field in Salford to test Fernandes one last time before the world championships in Hamburg, Germany in September. Last year's winner Samantha Warriner of New Zealand heads a number of top contenders that include: world cup winner Kirsten Sweetland of Canada, recent world long distance champion Leanda Cave of Great Britain, world Under23 champion Erin Densham of Australia and world cup winner Debbie Tanner of New Zealand.

The Salford BG Triathlon World Cup is part of the ITU's series of Olympic qualifiers where athletes can claim valuable points in the race to Beijing. The Olympic fields are capped at 55 for men and women with a maximum of three per National Federation. Also on the line is US$100,000 in prize money.
